The Boundary Dispute in England.

THE WAR IN CHINA.

The mails by the steamship Hungarian, whose arrival at Quebec has been already announced, reached this City yesterday afternoon.

We obtain some interesting extracts from our London files, which extend to the 21st ult., inclusive.

THE SAN JUAN BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

OPINIONS OF THE ENGLISH PRESS.

The English journals generally coincide in the views of the London Post, as given in our impression of Monday, that the occupation of San Juan by General HARNEY was a violation of the principles of public law. They, however, apprehend no serious misunderstanding between the two countries. The London Times takes no editorial notice of this new boundary dispute. The London News says:

"Both Governor DOUGLASS and General HARNEY had referred the matter respectively to London and Washington; and the question will now be treated quietly and with reason, as becomes the Governments of the two great divisions of the race which speaks the English language."

The London Star thus concludes a long explanatory article on the "difficulty:"

"Whatever view may be taken of the treaty, there can be no doubt as to the aggressive and unjustifiable conduct of Gen. HARNEY. He actually paid a visit to Gov. DOUGLASS at Victoria, the capital of Vancouver's Island, without opening his lips with regard to his ulterior designs; and he took forcible possession of San Juan without the production of any authority from his own Government, without any notice whatever to the British authorities whom he had just visited, and with the perfect knowledge that the island was admitted by both parties to be disputed territory, and that England had ceased to exercise exclusive sovereignty over it.

We are not sure that the Governor, after having adopted this just view of the question, and made up his mind that the two Governments could alone settle the difficulty, acted wisely in sending two ships of war and a body of sappers and miners to the scene of Gen. HARNEY's exploits, as there was, and perhaps is, considerable danger from the close contiguity of such highly explosive materials. It is far better that the question should remain untouched by the hands of subordinates. We, for our part, entertain a strong conviction that the American Government will not sanction the acts of Gen. HARNEY, so far as they have been aggressive. That person has been engaged for many years past in making war against the Indians, and he is probably unacquainted with the usages of civilized warfare. A hot-blooded Southerner, and notoriously identified with Cuban and Central American filibusters, he would, we have no doubt, consider it a sufficient reason for the capture of San Juan that it was claimed by this Government, and that it would be useful as a station for preventing the incursions of the Northern Indians into Washington Territory.

We believe that both the English and the American Governments will have too much good sense, and will be too much alive to the interests of their respective countries, to allow this paltry affair to endanger the friendship which now happily subsists between them. We are quite sure that the people of England will not be so unwise as to get angry or excited about it; and we hope our brethren across the water will regard it with that 'candid and dispassionate' spirit which one of their noblest writers, WASHINGTON IRVING, enjoins as the duty of the members of a Republic above all other men. If the two Governments cannot arrive at a satisfactory understanding, then why, instead of allowing bad blood to be generated, should they not refer the question in dispute to the arbitration of a friendly Power? Provision has already been made for this in the treaty which has reference to the Newfoundland fisheries; and if such a compact be expedient on the eastern shores of the continent, why should it not be equally advantageous on the western? One great good will, we hope, grow out of this quarrel. It is that the boundary question, which has been the cause of so many perils to the peace and happiness of the two nations, will now be brought to a final and everlasting settlement."

A correspondent of the Manchester Guardian gives the following amusing interpretation of the course of the boundary dispute:

"As the election of a new President of the United States in the place of Mr. BUCHANAN, will take place at the end of next year, it is incumbent on the White House managers to get up some exciting question out of which 'political capital' for the present Administration can be manufactured, and, therefore, it will surprise no one who is familiar with Washington tactics to find that a very substantial quarrel with England, or what may prove one if properly nursed, has been arranged on the coast of Columbia. Assuming that the telegram relating to the military occupation of San Juan, by Gen. HARNEY, is correct, one can easily understand why the affair was carried out in 'so unwarrantable and discourteous a manner.' When a quarrel is intended, it is not difficult to find men who will make things unpleasant. Gen. HARNEY, we are told, having landed with a small body of American troops, 'commenced erecting barracks, and issued a proclamation claiming the island as United States territory. He rejected the British proposition for a joint occupancy until the matter could be referred to the respective Governments, and refused to allow some British sappers and miners to land.' Now, if this be a true report of the affair, there can be little doubt as to what the object of the American Government is. After having seen so many quarrels break out always so very opportunely in the quadrennial Presidential year, it would be absurd to discuss the quarrel upon its own merits. The wisest course, in our opinion, supposing it should be ascertained, after due inquiry, that we have the best right to San Juan, would be for the British Government to state frankly what the rights of the case are, and, having done so, to add that, as the American people appear to be so very anxious to obtain possession of the island we shall make them a present of it. In that case, the American squadron which is now preparing, in so much haste, to aid our Anti-Slavery squadron on the African coast, will have some chance to arrive at its destination. On the other hand, should the quarrel with Great Britain grow a little stronger, we may expect to hear that the vessels which have been preparing at New-York for the suppression of the Slave-trade, have been sent to Vancouver's Island to support Gen. HARNEY."

The London Globe says:

"The claim advanced by the United States is a geographical question, and it is to be settled by the application of geographical science to the terms of the Convention of 1856, which established the 49th parallel of north latitude as the boundary between the territories of the two countries from the Rocky Mountains to the channel which separates Vancouver's Island from the continent, and thence through the middle of the channel and the Strait of San Juan de Fuca to the ocean. This is a question which turns upon facts, and upon the interpretation of a treaty stipulation read by the light of those facts. It was to ascertain the facts that Her Majesty's Government appointed Capt. PREVOST Commissioner, with the assistance of Capt. RICHARDS as second Commissioner; the instructions to those gentlemen were simply a repetition of the terms of the treaty."

THE NEW CHINA WAR.

MOVEMENTS OF THE AMERICAN COMMISSIONERS.

From the Paris Patrie.

The most extraordinary rumors have been in circulation relative to the proceedings of Mr. Ward, the American Minister in China. A letter, three days later than the dispatches from Hong Kong, gives some particulars, which seem exact: "Mr. FISH, the American Consul at Shanghai, received intelligence that Mr. WARD had ascended a small river which falls into the Gulf of Petchili, and which runs parallel with the Pei-ho, but is not a branch of it, as stated, and had reached the town of Hukua, but as the steamer Toey-wam which took him up, could not get any further, he was obliged to stop at that place. Mr. WARD was in hopes of going from that town to Peking by land, and was waiting for a mandarin to accompany him to the Chinese capital. The American Commodore, TATNALL, had ascended the same river in the steam corvette Powhatan, but could not go up as far as the Toey-wam, and had stopped short at about twelve miles from the mouth of the river. The Americans had taken into their service Chinese pilots, authorized to act for them by the Governor of Petchili. Such were the incidents which took place, and it is to them that must be attributed the rumor that the American legation had ascended the Pei-ho after the combat, and continued their route to Peking. If the information received by Mr. FISH was correct, the conclusion must be arrived at that Mr. WARD, at the late dates, received an assurance that he could safely proceed by land to Peking with his legation. The same letter affirmed that Admiral HOPE had been anxious to renew the combat, and again attack the forts of Takou, declaring that nothing should be attempted until the Home Government had been referred to. Admiral HOPE wrote a letter of thanks to Capt. TRICAULT, of the French steam-frigate Duchayla, for the admirable conduct of his men. During the whole of the combat the greatest cordiality prevailed between the seamen of the two nations.

THE AMERICANS IN THE BATTLE OF THE PEI-HO.

As for the part played by the Americans in this affair, though it never assumed a hostile character, it was becoming and worthy of them. The evening preceding the hostilities, Com. TATNALL had offered the English Admiral to contribute on his part his contingent of marines, small as it was. This offer, cordially made, though, perhaps, somewhat tardy, was declined. During the action the American aviso was present, not firing, it is true, a single shot, but being at hand whenever it could render assistance, collecting the wounded, and helping the most injured gunboats whenever it saw their manœuvres compromised or embarrassed; in a word, maintaining its place of honor calmly and bravely by the side of the English. The American Minister, who had at first refused to believe in the existence of a navigable arm of the river ten miles from Pei-ho, had since reconnoitred, and ascertained the truth of the statement of the Mongols of Takou; and when we were leaving the Petchili, he was preparing to make a second exploration, in order to assure himself, by the aid of a Chinese pilot promised him by the Governor of the province, whether or not the new arm was navigable for a vessel of the draught of his aviso. Since this no news of the doings of the United States Legation has reached Shanghai. In the situation of the American policy of 1858 and 1859 toward the Chinese Government, it is quite possible that from one day to another we may hear that Mr. WARD has exchanged the ratifications of his treaty, if not at Peking, at least at Tien-Tsin, or elsewhere; the exact plan of this exchange not having been specified in the treaty concluded last year. . . Moreover, it appears to me that, considering the traditional subtlety of the Chinese policy, a favorable reception of the United States flag may be deemed by them the best, if not the only line of conduct whereby to justify themselves in the eyes of Europe for the doings of Petchili; thus establishing by the very character of this reception a different light in which it regards one ally who presents himself peacefully, and another who arrives at the gates of its capital with all the appearance of a nation, if not hostile, at least disposed to use force. . . . Did the Admiral act well or ill in a military point of view? Was his reconnaissance of the 25th sufficiently complete? Was the landing judicious? These are technical questions to be decided by the English Admiralty, that stern tribunal which twice felt called upon to summon to its bar its greatest sailor, NELSON; that inflexible school which forms not only practical sailors, but officers feeling the responsibility of command, and the gravity of the duty it imposes. Let us not anticipate the decision of such a tribunal, but render, as is just, to brave men the honor which is their due, and which they have purchased with their blood. * * * Although wounded early in the action by the bursting of an obus, Admiral HOPE would not retire, but remained encouraging his men by his presence wherever the danger seemed greatest—in short, doing his duty as commander in every sense of the term. * * By his order was Captain TRICAULT, commander of our corvette, acting as his first aide-de-camp, never quitting him during the action, raising him when he was wounded, and only parting from him when he went to place himself at the head of the handful of sailors he led at the landing. * * * This affair will have no bad influence upon the commercial interests of Europe in other parts of China. * * * The authorities of Shanghai describe it as "a great local affair, very much to be regretted for the two parties interested, but with which the people of Shanghai or the other commercial and quiet cities of the south had nothing to do." * * China feels and does nothing like any other country in the world. With her all is contrast or contradiction.

BRITISH OPINIONS OF AMERICAN NEUTRALITY.

A correspondent of the London Star says:

"There is one question which must often occur to the public in connection with our Chinese relations. How is it that we cannot take common ground with the Americans in our proceedings with that country? We do not profess to have any exclusive interests at stake. Every step gained is a gain for them as well as for ourselves. They are negotiating for the same object as ourselves. Why cannot we, then, act in concert with that country? There can be but one answer. Our admirals, and governors, and ambassadors claim the privilege of going to war with the Chinese without waiting for instructions from home, and with the assurance that either by the influence of their family connexions in the Cabinet, or through the readiness of the English nation to enter into a war, they will be supported and carried through at any cost. The American people allow no such latitudes to their servants abroad. When the French and American Ministers invited Mr. REID, the late United States Commissioner, to unite with them in their hostile operations against China, he replied that his country was at peace with that empire, and until a declaration of war was voted by a majority of the representatives of the American people at Washington, he had no power to enter upon hostilities. Would not the balance of advantages be on our side if we also kept the reins in our own hands, and occupied common ground with the Americans? They are not a whit less determined than ourselves to accomplish every national object they have in view. They succeeded in opening the way into Japan by a great display of tact, temper, and patience, reserving the use of force until kindness, exhibited in a liberal display of such presents as miniature locomotives, electric telegraphs, and works of art, has won its way to the hearts of that singular people. Is it quite certain that, acting on a similar forbearance, the American Minister will not reach Peking before the representatives of France and England shall have fought their way to that capital? In mean time, the Americans contrive to consume about half as much tea as ourselves, without wars or large navies, or Hong Kongs, or any of those expenses rendered necessary by our hostile policy, and which amounts in the aggregate to nearly as much as the whole value of our exports to China. Will not the people of this country, by and bye, see how the question of taxation is involved in the policy of permitting governors, admirals, and ambassadors to begin war at their pleasure?"

We also find the following letter addressed to the editor of the Liverpool Post:

SIR: The London Times of the 13th inst., closes a leader on the late Chinese affair with the following spiteful remark upon the Americans.

"The American ambassador, without the force of arms, is said to have been admitted at Peking. Of course, he had a peculiar claim to this exceptional privilege on account of the assistance given to the Chinese Mandarins to deprive us of the just fruits of the late successful war. Whether this, or some new claim of the same character, rendered him more admissible than those who had opened the way to him, does not yet appear. If the Americans can open China to all nations by peaceful methods, let them do it; but, thus far, they seem better able to help themselves than do anything for the world at large."

This was before learning full particulars. The same paper, of the 16th instant, has an article from an "Eye Witness," closing as follows:—"Already I have trespassed too much on your valuable space, but I cannot end without referring to one matter that, in connection with this battle, should be ever remembered. Were we children of the same mother, we could not have received more sympathy and kindnesss than we met with from the Americans. As we passed into the assault Flag-officer (Anglice Admiral) TATNALL was heard to say, 'Blood is thicker than water,' and in a hundred different ways he and all his people, to the very cabin boys, acted up to this homely proverb. When he heard that our admiral was wounded, t great personal risk he went on board the Cormorant to see him. Many of our men slept on the toeyan (American tenders) on the night of the fight; cigars, coffee, brandy, everything a man could want, were placed before them. The American crew forgot themselves, and thought only of the British. A few days after the fight a Chinese junk, with a flag of truce, brought fresh provisions to the Powhatan (United States frigate.) These were immediately sent to our wounded. The bond of American brotherhood was, indeed, deeply cemented in our trial at the Peiho. I believe there was not a man in the whole fleet who did not feel it growing up within him, and I am sure there are thousands, if I may not say millions, at both sides of the Atlantic who will join me in the fervent wish that that feeling of brotherhood may take deeper and deeper root in both lands.'

Permit me to ask which of the two are we to accept as real British feeling towards us AMERICANS.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 16, 1859."

LORD DERBY'S IRISH EVICTIONS.

JUSTIFICATION OF HIS COURSE.

From the Dublin Correspondence of the Times.

A correspondent of Saunders' Newsletter, resident in the district which is just now attracting a large share of public attention, justifies the step about to be taken by Lord DERBY in retaliation for the Doon murder, on the grounds following:

"A brutal murder has been committed in the face of day, within a few hundred yards of a police barrack. An inoffensive man has been shot, and the murderer has, as yet, escaped detection. The police are on the alert, large rewards have been offered, and all to no purpose. Seeing this, Lord DERBY, who upon all hands is allowed to be one of the most indulgent landlords in Ireland, has determined—upon the principle that 'sharp diseases require sharp remedies'—to clear off all the tenants, with the exception of those related to the murdered man, from the estate upon which rests the foul reproach of harboring the assassin. Now, there is not a shadow of doubt that the murderer of CROWE is perfectly well known to most, if not all, of the tenants of the Doon estate, and it is equally certain that nothing has been left undone by them which could screen him from justice. If other proof were wanting of this, the audacious openness with which the murder was committed would be amply sufficient to prove it. But no one possessed of common observation, and who has resided for any time in Ireland, is ignorant of the fact that the law is regarded by the great body of the peasantry as an enemy, against which they feel it an imperative duty to contend—that the whole and sole allegiance they render is so the Riband confederacy, and that the 'boy in throuble' is a person to whom the hand of fellowship and protection is extended, aye, even by the nearest relations of his victim. To give an instance. Not three miles from where I am writing, about, I think, three or four years ago, a man was returning home one evening, when he was met and murdered by a man, (whose name is perfectly well known,) who fractured his skull with a paving stone and left him dead on the road. Mark the consequence. The murdered man was found dead on the road, brought home, buried, and the whole matter was hushed up. By whom? By his own nearest relations. Suspicion, however, arose, and an order was given that the body should be exhumed, and the resident magistrate proceeded with a body of police to disinter the corpse. In the very churchyard, when the police arrived, they found a large body of peasantry, led and directed by the murdered man's nearest relatives, who swore that no one should take a sod off the grave. The magistrate, however, a cool and determined man, persevered, the body was disinterred, and the skull found by the medical man present to be frightfully fractured. Warrants were issued for the apprehension of the murderer, rewards offered, but without effect; he got out of the country, and it was afterwards discovered that during his stay here he had been concealed in a manure heap, and supplied with food by the very family of his victim, the better to ward off suspicion. Again, within the last two years, a man, when returning home, was met by a parcel of ruffians, who beat him in such a savage manner with loaded sticks and stones, that, at last, in the agonies of death, the unfortunate man cried out, "Oh, for God's sake, boys, in mercy shoot me, and put me out of my misery." The man was brought home, and expired in a few moments, and as his wife and daughter stood over his bloody corpse, when the last breath had just passed his lips, the wife said to the daughter, 'He's gone now, and let us say nothing about it, for we can't bring him back, and we might get into trouble.' For this crime also no one was brought to justice. Both circumstances are beyond dispute, and, with such 'damning evidences' of a people's guilt before us, can we, dare we, assert that Lord DERBY is not perfectly justified in the course he has announced his intention of taking? Is it not a sight to make one shudder to see the relatives of a murdered man standing round his corpse, and coolly planning means whereby to secure impunity to his murderer? I know well the miserable consequences of an eviction such as Lord DERBY meditates, but the people have brought it on themselves. When people combine in casting aside all natural affections, and yield up themselves and their liberties to confederated assassins, surely it is full time for landlords in Ireland to put a stop to such infamy. And how can they put a stop to it, except by following the example of Lord DERBY, and openly declaring that they will level every roof-tree on their estates rather than permit them to shelter assassins? If this were once an understood fact, then the bloody conclave that dares to usurp the powers of the law, and sit in judgment on their fellow-men would be scattered to the winds when they felt their villany coming home to themselves, and life and property would be as secure in Ireland as in England. If that diabolical confederation that sits like a nightmare on this unhappy country were once removed, (and removed it might be, were the landlords unanimous,) a more healthy feeling would be disseminated through the country, men would learn to look up to the law as their natural protector, and entertain towards the cowardly assassin the hatred and abhorrence that all right-minded men do, the hands of all would be eagerly extended, not, as is the case now, to shield the assassin, but to deliver him up to justice, the stream of emigration would be stayed, the increase of capital would call forth the great natural powers of the country, and Ireland would become an ornament to the British dominions, instead of being, as it is now, a blot and a disgrace.

THE VERDICT IN THE GREAT EASTERN EXPLOSION.

The Manchester Guardian of Sept. 21 says:

"The inquest on the bodies of the men who were killed by the explosion on board the Great Eastern was brought to a close on the night of the 19th, the verdict being to the effect that the disaster had been caused by the closing of the fatal tap, but that there was no evidence to show by whom the tap had been shut off. The jury condemned the use of such contrivances as this stop-cock, and they certainly have the evidence of Mr. GALLOWAY, of the Board of Trade, in support of their deliberate opinion. The jury add that the engineers had not used proper caution in attending to the ship's machinery; but here, of course, rises the serious difficulty, 'Who are the engineers in question?' Mr. SCOTT RUSSELL states that he and his foreman, Mr. DICKSON, were on board simply as amateurs, while Capt. HARRISON declares in a very emphatic manner, 'If I had been informed that Mr. RUSSELL was merely a volunteer, lending his assistance for the benefit of the Company, I would not have allowed him, or any other person excepting my own officers, to occupy the position he did." Captain HARRISON states most positively that Mr. RUSSELL was in charge, and for this very good reason that his contract with the Company had not been completed. Mr. RUSSELL, on the other hand, holds that he had finished his contract, but we believe that this point is likely to be decided by a legal tribunal. Several gentlemen who were on board the ship when the explosion occurred, have written to the London papers expressing their confident opinion that the engines were under the direction of Mr. RUSSELL; they observed that he was a person who superintended everything, and who issued the necessary orders.

FRENCH LIBERTY OF THE PRESS.

CIRCULAR OF THE MINISTER OF THE INTERIOR.

The French Minister of the Interior has addressed to the Prefects the following circular:

PARIS, Sept. 18, 1859.

M. LE PREFET: By a recent act, which was inspired by a noble sentiment of conciliation, all the journals of Paris, and of the departments, have been relieved from the warnings with which they had been visited.

In giving this example of his good will towards the French press, the Emperor has once more proved that the moderation of his policy is equal to the force of his authority; his generous and high prerogative has effaced the rigors which had become necessary to the interest of society.

All the journals at present in existence, and which had been affected by the application of Article 32 of the decree of the 17th February, 1852, thus escape the consequences of the measures they had incurred, and find themselves in the face of this decree in the same position as if it were a new law.

It seems to me then to be necessary to refer to its principles, and to explain to you the spirit in which I conceive of its application, so far as the duties devolving on the Administration are concerned.

The decree of the 17th February, 1852, is not, as has too often been said, a law for the occasion, born of a social crisis, and which could not be suitable to ordinary times. Like all other political laws, this one is no doubt susceptible of ameliorations, the vtility of which might appear from experience; but the principles upon which the decree of 1852 is founded are intimately connected with the restoration of authority in France and with the constitution of the unity of power upon the basis of universal suffrage.

The Emperor's Government is not afraid of the fair discussion of its acts; it is strong enough to fear no attack. Its basis is too wide, its policy is too national, its administration too pure for falsehood and calumny to take away anything of its moral power. But if it is protected by its incontestable force even against the abuses of liberty, there are considerations, independent of any fear, and derived solely from the public interest, that oblige it not to renounce those legal weapons which, in a great country like France, and under a régime that is the most complete expression of the national will, are securities and not restrictions.

The right of displaying and publishing their opinions, which belongs to all Frenchmen, is a conquest of 1789, which cannot be taken away from a people so enlightened as that of France; but this right must not be confounded with the exercise of the liberty of the Press by means of periodical journals.

Journals are collective agencies organized within the State, and they have under every régime been subjected to special regulations. The State has then its rights and its duties as to exceptional measures of precaution and surveillance for journals, and when it reserves to itself the power of directly repressing their excesses by administrative interposition, it does not restrict liberty of thought, but only employs a method of protecting the interests of society. The employment of this method of protection, which incontestably belongs to it, implies a spirit of great justice, moderation and firmness.

I will add that in the matter of administrative jurisdiction over the Press, a due measure is especially necessary; and I cannot dwell too much upon this point. Because it is the will and the duty of Government not to let the principle of its authority be weakened in its hands, it cannot therefore bring to bear upon liberty of discussion any restrictions except those which are enjoined by respect for the Constitution, and by the interests of order, public morality and religion.

The Government will thus, far from imposing a servile approbation of its acts, always tolerate serious contradictions; it will allow the right of revision, not confounding it with systematic opposition and calculating malevolence. The Government asks no better than to have its authority enlightened by discussion, but it will never permit society to be troubled by guilty incitements and hostile passions.

Finally, M. LE PREFET, I rely upon your entire zeal to discharge this part of your functions. In the co-operation which you will have to give me you will equally avoid, on the one hand, that weakness which would allow of license, and on the other hand that exaggeration by which liberty would be restricted. In this manner you will enter into the Emperor's views and merit his approbation. Accept the assurance of my distinguished consideration.

The Minister of the Interior, Duke of PADUA.

Wife Murder at Detroit.

The Detroit Advertiser, Oct. 3, says: "On Saturday, about noon, THOMAS HIGGINS, who, with his wife and two children reside in Windsor, opposite this city, went to his house from his work and ate his dinner. After his meal was over he became incensed at his wife, (according to the testimony of his little son,) who was intoxicated, and hit her upon the head several times with a stick of cordwood and a piece of a cane. He knocked her down upon the floor, kicked her in the region of the kidneys, and leaving her on the floor, went to his work. His little boy gave the alarm, and Officer SAMUEL PORT proceeded to the house, where he found the woman seated in a chair, still alive, but where she soon died. The officer, after putting the corpse in charge of some of the neighbors, went to the Great Western Railway freight depôt, where HIGGINS was employed, and arrested him. A post-mortem examination was held, by which it appeared that the scalp was badly cut in several places; that concussion of the brain resulted from the blows, and that the kick said to have been given caused the rupture of some of the blood-vessels. The little boy whose testimony was taken is only six years of age. The only other witness is the daughter, aged eight years, who ran away at the time the Coroner's inquest was in session, but who was found afterwards. HIGGINS informed our reporter that he had had a great deal of trouble with his wife on account of her drinking propensities, and then exclaimed, 'I couldn't help it.'"

NEWS BY TELEGRAPH.

ANOTHER NICARAGUA EXPEDITION.

Gen. Walker gone to Nicaragua—The Collector of New-Orleans Duped—A New Route to the Chiriqui Diggings.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

Collector HATCH has refused a clearance of the steamer Philadelphia, for Aspinwall, because it is alleged the steamer is engaged to take Gen. WALKER and two or three hundred men from Texas, Alabama and elsewhere, now encamped below this city, and ready to start for Nicaragua. They are ostensibly bound to the Chiriqui diggings, and intending to leave on the 5th.

LATER.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

Gen. WALKER and his men got off last night, and sailed from Berwick's Bay, this morning, in their own steamer, without a clearance.

HARRY MAURY commands WALKER's steamer.

The attempted clearance of the Philadelphia for Aspinwall was to blind the authorities.

THE EXPEDITION AS VIEWED FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

A month ago information was received in this city of filibustering movements against Nicaragua. Although the statement was not fully credited, it was deemed of sufficient importance to justisfy the issuance of instructions to the proper Federal officers to exercise more than ordinary vigilance, the President himself superintending these precautionary measures.

The recent advertisement in the New-Orleans papers of a steamship to start from Mobile for Chiriqui, on the 1st of October, added to the other accumulating suspicious circumstances attending the alleged contemplated invasion of Nicaragua, but on inquiry of the Collector at Mobile, nothing had been heard to confirm the truth of the report so far as that port is concerned.

Within the present week reliable information has been received here, as was stated in the general newspaper dispatch yesterday, that a large number of strangers were in New-Orleans, including many prominent persons known to have been heretofore connected with fillibustering enterprises, and this, together with other circumstances, created a suspicion in the mind of Collector HATCH that they meditated an unlawful expedition.

Late last night a hundred or a hundred and fifty of them left that city, the presumption being that they had gone to Balize to await a vessel. A clearance had been asked for the steamer Philadelphia, professedly for Chiriqui, but which Collector HATCH refused for the reasons above stated. The agent of this steamer was persistent, and again applied for a clearance, but met with no better success than at first. Of these facts our Government is informed, and probably they are the only ones from authentic sources in its possession.

It is rumored that this subject was to-day a matter of Cabinet consultation. Orders have been dispatched by telegraph to the commanding officer at Baton Rouge for concentrating and holding the Federal military in reserve, to be used if necessary as a posse comitatus for the enforcement of the laws.

It is believed here, and the facts which have just transpired seem to warrant the conclusion, that the fillibusters so arranged their plans as to avail themselves of the advantages afforded by the reopening of the Nicaragua Transit route for the accomplishment of their design.

The Administration is determined, by all the means in its power, including the employment of the land and naval forces, to compel respect to the neutrality law.

The instructions to Minister DIMITRY are particularly with reference to the reopening of the transit, and as both Governments have assented to the Lamar-Zeledon treaty, it is supposed Nicaragua will offer no obstacle to the passage of the mails. The presence of the Postmaster-General in New-York, in connection with the last-named subject, is expressive of the interest the Government has in the fulfillment of the Johnson contract.

Still Later from California.

ARRIVAL OF THE OVERLAND MAIL OF THE 12TH ULT.—ENTIRE SUCCESS OF THE ADMINISTRATION PARTY CONFIRMED—A DUEL PREVENTED—TRADE AND SHIPPING.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The Overland Mail has reached Jefferson City with San Francisco dates of the 12th ultimo.

Sufficient returns had been received to insure the election of the entire Lecompton Democratic State ticket. The Lecompton candidates for Supreme Judge and State Printer, and the two Lecompton candidates for members of Congress were also elected.

There was also a very large Lecompton majority in both branches of the Legislature.

The People's Reform Ticket in San Francisco was elected by a majority of from one to three thousand.

Just previous to the departure of the Mail of the 9th ultimo, Judge TERRY challenged Senator BRODERICK, which the latter seems to have accepted, as a meeting between the parties was prevented on the morning of the 12th by the Police.

Business at San Francisco continued dull, with a light country demand. Quotations were nominally unchanged, but for the few goods selling buyers obtained better terms.

Arrived at San Francisco—Ship Viking, Winsor, April 25; steamer Orizaba, Blethen, Panama; ship Greenland, Bates, Liverpool, March 24.

Sailed—Ships Mastiff for Hong Kong; Achilles for Sidney, N. S. W.; Belle of the West, Howes, for Melbourne.

BASS RIVER BANK INVESTIGATION—MURDEROUS ASSAULT—BANK STATEMENT—MISCELLANEOUS.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Bass River Bank yesterday, at Beverly, a Committee was appointed to investigate its affairs. This action was taken in view of recent injurious reports from New-York and elsewhere.

MOSES MURRAY, of Dorchester, attempted to kill BENJAMIN LINDSEY, of Linnfield, yesterday, by firing a pistol at him. Mr. MURRAY, at LINDSEY's house, asked the latter if he had married a certain lady, and receiving an affirmative reply, shot at him, the charge taking effect only in his hand. MURRAY then made his escape. The officers are on his track.

The following is the weekly statement of the Boston Banks:

RICHARD T. WESCOTT, sent home by the American Consul at Amsterdam, charged with the murder of JOHN BROWN, a seaman of the bark Mounteneer, was examined to-day before U. S. Commissioner GUILD, who discharged the defendant, no evidence o a criminating character being offered.

United States ship Vincennes was at Loando, Africa, Aug. 14. All well.

The Putnam Phalanx, of Hartford, arrived in this city this afternoon. They were welcomed in a speech by Mayor LINCOLN and a salute by Capt. NIMS' Flying Artillery. To-morrow they visit Bunker Hill, and will be reviewed on Boston Common. They are receiving this evening every attention from our citizens.

Burning of the Ship Rome.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The ship Rome, of Baltimore, from Liverpool, arrived at St. Thomas evening of the 16th ult., with her cargo on fire in the lower hold, and was burnt to the water's edge, in 23 feet of water, on the night of the 18th. Her sails and rigging were saved.

State Fairs.

THE FAIR AT ST. LOUIS—OPENING OF THE MICHIGAN STATE FAIR AT DETROIT.

ST. LOUIS, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The results of the fourth annual Fair, which closed yesterday, were eminently satisfactory. The display of animals was never, perhaps, equaled in this or any other country. The array of machines, agricultural implements, textile fabrics, and specimens of handicraft generally, were unusually comprehensive, while the varied fruits and flowers were very creditable to the horticultural progress of the West. The attendance on the grounds during the entire seven days was unprecedented, and the receipts amount to nearly $50,000.

The Directors contemplate the removal of the present amphitheatre, and the erection of one double the capacity.

The race in the Abbey Park this afternoon between Flora Temple, Princess and Ike Cook, was won by Flora Temple in three straight heats. Time, 2:25¼, 2:25¾ and 2:28.

THE OPENING DAY—PROGRAMME OF THE EXHIBITION.

DETROIT, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The Fair of the Michigan State Agricultural Society opened to-day, and will continue in session four days. The first day will be devoted to entries, the second to the examination of cattle, the third to the examination of horses, and the fourth to the awarding of prizes and the exhibition of premium articles. Gov. BANKS, of Massachusetts, is expected to arrive this evening, and on Thursday will deliver the annual address before the Society. HORACE GREELEY is also expected to be present and deliver an address. The weather is very fine, and the entries and attendance large.

MARYLAND INSTITUTE EXHIBITION.

BALTIMORE, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The twelfth annual exhibition of the Maryland Institute opened to-night. The attendance was large and the display fine.

Important Rumor Relative to Chinese Affairs.

THE DEFENCE OF THE PEI-HO REPUDIATED AT PEKING.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

F. B. BEAUMONT, of Jamaica Plain, and now a resident of Hong Kong, China, in a letter, dated 21st July, says: "A rumor here, probably a Chinese story, is that the Emperor has sent a communication to the Governor of Shanghai, saying that the firing from the forts at the mouth of the Pei-ho River, upon the British and French Embassy, was not by his orders, but by those of Mandarins, whose heads he has ordered to be struck off for the act. It is expected that the American Minister, Mr. WARD, has proceeded to Peking. Mr. BRUCE, the British Minister, has gone to Japan, to remain there awhile."

Constitutional Election in Kansas.

PROBABLE SUCCESS OF THE WYANDOTTE CONSTITUTION—MAJORITIES.

LEAVENWORTH, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The election to-day on the question of the acceptance or rejection of the Wyandotte Constitution, passed off quietly. The adoption of the Constitution is generally conceded.

Leavenworth City gives 231 majority for the Constitution.

Atchison township gives 1 majority for the Constitution. Other townships to hear from will increase.

Another Alleged British Outrage.

AN AMERICAN VESSEL FIRED INTO AND BOARDED BY A BRITISH CRUISER.

BOSTON, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The bark Hazard, Capt. GOODRICH, arrived at this port to-day from Loando, on the West Coast of Africa. Left Aug. 14, at which date the U. S. ship Vincennes was in port, all well. Capt. GOODRIDGE reports that while on the African Coast, on May 8, was fired into by the British steamer Pluto, which sent a boat alongside after heaving to. Capt. GOODRIDGE declined permitting them to board, and they went away without further trouble, after damning the American flag, to which their attention was directed, at the peak.

From Philadelphia.

ERROR IN THE REPORT OF THE YACHT RACE—THE LYNN FIRE COMPANY.

PHILADELPHIA, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The report that the yacht Esling won the championship from the George M. Hill yesterday was incorrect. The Esling led the way, when by skilfull management the Hill got ahead and rounded the buoy at the starting point eight seconds ahead. The Esling men complain of foul play and a meeting of the Yacht Club has been called to consider their appeal.

The members of Empire Fire Company of Lynn left for home this morning. A few of the members remain to attend their brethren, injured at the late fire here.

Incendiarism in Newark, N. J.

TENEMENTS, BARNS AND STABLES DESTROYED.

NEWARK, N. J., Tuesday, Oct. 4.

Periodical outbreaks of incendiarism are becoming quite frequent here, and something very serious may soon occur unless the Fire Department are provided with improved water facilities, especially in the outer Wards. At 12 o'clock last night a fire broke out on the corner of Broome and Mercer streets, destroying a stable and several tenant houses to the value of about $3,000. Some narrow escapes from death occurred, and a number of poor families were rendered homeless.

At about 3 o'clock this morning a barn on Wickliffe-street was set on fire, destroying it, with a neighboring cottage, etc., owned by Wm. RANKIN; also, a fine horse. Loss over $2,000. No insurance.

Fire at Southington, Conn.

FACTORY OF PECK, SMITH AND CO. DESTROYED.

SOUTHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 3, 1859.

The large manufactory of PECK, SMITH & CO., was burned yesterday afternoon. Two hundred and fifty workmen are thus thrown out of employ, and property to the amount of $100,000, it is estimated, is destroyed. Insurance about $60,000. This is the third factory burned in this place within the year, all on Sunday, and all evidently set on fire. Many different kinds of hardware were made here, principally tinmen's tools, coffee-mills and meat cutters. It will probably be rebuilt.

Georgia Election.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Tuesday, Oct. 4.

The election returns thus far are very meagre, but leave no doubt of the election of Gov. BROWN, Democrat, by a heavy majority. In the Seventh and Eighth Congressional Districts, the returns indicate the election of the Democratic nominees.

The Alabama River.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Tuesday, Oct. 4.

There is now in our river a depth of water of six feet six inches, and boats are arriving and departing every day. Some of these boats are the finest and fastest on the river.

Non-Arrival of the Canada.

SACKVILLE, N. B., Tuesday, Oct. 4—8 P. M.

There are yet no signs at Halifax of the British Mail steamship Canada, now due, with Liverpool dates of the 24th ult. The weather is fine.

Judicial Nomination in this State.

ALBANY, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

RUFUS W. PECKHAM was nominated to-day by the Republicans, for Supreme Court Judge in the Second District, after a spirited contest. The result created some dissatisfaction in consequence of rumors of unfair proceedings in the admission of delegates.

The Crops in Louisiana.

COTTON HIGHLY PROMISING—SUGAR DEFICIENT.

NEW-ORLEANS, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

NEWPORT OUT OF SEASON.

The Relicts of the Summer—Reminiscences—The Dwellers in Newport in Olden Times—A Pair of Philanthropists.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

NEWPORT, Thursday, Sept. 29, 1859.

Newport presents a striking contrast at the present time to what it was during the reign of fashion, two months since. The hotels are closed, the avenues deserted, and a solemn stillness seems to pervade the entire city. The people of Newport—I mean the native sons and daughters—will soon inaugurate their season of pleasure and amusement. Tea parties, social gatherings, and occasionally the pomp and splendor of a ball, are the sources of enjoyment through the otherwise dull and dreary Winter. I fancy the approaching Winter season will be one of unusual hilarity and good cheer. Many of the cottages will be occupied, and quite a number of visitors will linger here through the first weeks of the cold season. A visit to the beach to-day convinced one more effectually of the desolation of the place. The grand old waves rolled in one upon the other with a hollow, mournful sound, as if singing the requiem of the dying season. The hard, smooth sands, once trod by a hundred busy feet, lay outstretched without a solitary person upon them; the signal-flag no longer flutters from its airy elevation, and the sea-birds' cry, as they flew from rock to rock, was followed by the dull echo of the surf, as it ebbed and flowed unbidden. The transformation was complete.

We will return and take a stroll through Thames-street by gaslight. Our gloomy feelings are soon aroused by the clatter of carriage wheels, and a gay equipage dashes past, drawn by a beautiful span, driven by a negro man in blue livery. Yet this is one of the permanent institutions and belongs to our friend W——. The store windows are brilliantly lighted, displaying new style goods, and the walks are crowded by the town folk pedestrianizing.

BLONDEL VON CUELEBROECK, Minister from Belgium, and DE BRANDIERE, Private Secretary, are the only distinguished personages. The Hon. and Mrs. MILLARD FILLMORE have been staying at the Fillmore House until yesterday, and now that house is about to be closed. The past season has been one of success, particularly to the pockets of hotel and boarding-house keepers. The Ocean House received the most extensive patronage, having registered from June 15 to Sept. 10, a period of nearly three months, no less than twenty-five hundred names. The Atlantic had nearly a thousand, and the Fillmore next in numerical order. The cottages and boarding-house residents numbered about sixteen hundred, so that the whole number of visitors the past Summer, during the period named, may be safely estimated at seven thousand, and it is said that $600,000 has been the revenue received by the five principal hotels.

The present time is neither in or out of season. Perhaps it may be more appropriately expressed by designating it the period of real enjoyment instead of the season of fashion. Albeit the sea winds are a little chilly, yet nature is adorned with a charming vesture, the sky is remarkably serene, the sea-side haunts are lovely and a true appreciator of nature can very much enjoy the present month at Newport.

In this interval between hay and grass—refinedly expressed, seed-time and harvest—I have sharpened my pen to give you a brief sketch of some of the eminent sons of Newport. Be it known that this antiquated town was once the home of learning and cultivation, as well as of great wealth and commerce,—and, in saying this, I do not mean to reflect upon the character of the good people of Newport, for there are excellent schools here. Once, too, there was enterprise among the people, and here I do mean to reflect upon the present generation. This town is the birthplace, and has been the home, of many of the most eminent men of whom our country can boast. Dr. WATERHOUSE, himself a native, once said: "That in no spot of the Thirteen Colonies was there concentrated more individual opulence, learning, and liberal leisure." They consist of men who have benefited society and the world, and who have served the country in the various social professions—on the Bench, in the Pulpit, at the Bar, on the battle-field, and in the more peaceful walks of life. First among the catalogue may be mentioned the name of WM. CHANNING, who was born in Newport in 1751, and educated at Princeton College. He was a classmate and friend of SAMUEL L. SMITH, distinguished as a theologian, and enjoyed the instruction of the celebrated Dr. WITHERSPOON. He was considered one of the ablest lawyers of the times, and was honored by the office of Attorney-General in 1777, and upon the adoption of the Federal Constitution was appointed District-Attorney. He was a very conscientious and pious man, and died in Newport in 1793, aged 42. Another lawyer of eminence was ASHER ROBBINS, Esq., a native of Newport. He was a man of profound learning, and one of the best Greek scholars in the United States. He was elected to the United States Senate, and served there with energy and faithfulness. One of the most eminent men in the country, in his day, a resident of Newport, was Dr. WILLIAM HUNTER. Born in Scotland in 1729, and educated at Edinburgh and Leyden, he came to the United States in 1752, and in 1754-6 gave the first lectures on Anatomy—the history and comparative—ever delivered in New-England, and supposed the first in the country. Previous to leaving Scotland, and while pursuing his collegiate studies, he became flattered by CROMWELL the Pretender, and leaving his books, entered the fatal field of Culloden, and held the place of surgeon's mate to the celebrated Dr. MIDDLETON, of New-York. In Rhode Island he was appointed Surgeon of the troops sent by the colony to Canada. A man of fine talents, and a "more exact knowledge of anatomy and more chirurgical skill than existed in any of the Colonies" at that period. He was said to have been one of the handsomest men of his day, and his medical library was the largest of any in New-England. He married a daughter of GODFREY MALBONE, Esq., the noted painter, and died in 1777. The son of Dr. HUNTER was the Hon. WILLIAM HUNTER, LLD., who also adorned with honor his native town. He was a Senator in Congress, and subsequently appointed American Minister to Brazil. A man of the most extensive learning, and celebrated for his eloquence. A granite monument is erected to his memory in old Trinity Churchyard.

Among the host of divines of which Newport could boast in early colony times were CALLENDER, STYLES, HOPKINS, CLAPP, HONEYMAN and BERKELEY. Perhaps the latter should be mentioned first. The learned Bishop of Cloyne came to Newport in 1729 from England. He had a farm of ninety acres a few miles from the town still known as "Whitehall." Tradition still points out his favorite retreat for reading and study among the rocks that project over the surging waters of the ocean; and it is reputed that those sublime lines, so poetical in conception, and which have been already partially realized, predicting the future greatness of America, were composed in the solitude of these rocks. BERKELEY spent three years of his life at Newport. He brought over the first organ which ever hymned the praise of God in America, and with him came the first artist that dwelt amidst its wilds. The lives of the Rev. JOHN CALLENDER, Dr. EZRA STYLES, connected as they are with more national subjects, are well known. The Rev. SAMUEL HOPKINS was the author of the Hopkinson system. During the Revolution, his church was occupied as a barrack by the British troops, and while being repaired in 1836, a portion of their uniform was found beneath the rafters. The celebrated HENRY MARCHANT lived for a long time at Newport, and received his boyhood education here. He practiced law here, and was said to be the only liberty lawyer then in the Colony. He was at the head of the profession—was Attorney-General of the Colony, a signer of the articles of Confederation, and Delegate to the Continental Congress with WM. ELLERY. He was nominated by WASHINGTON, and received the appointment of District Judge. He died, lamented, in 1796.

MATHEW ROBINSON was a native of Newport, where he was born in 1709. He studied law in Boston, and practiced here. He was a great student, and particularly learned in estates and titles. He was a very eccentric person. His splendid library was dispersed and scattered at his death, to various parts of the Colonies. He was very kind at heart, and "his house was a mansion of hospitality." He was buried at Kingston, R. I.

Of Artists, Newport has been the home of many. The names of GILBERT STEWART, EDWARD MALBONE, WILLIAM CLAGGETT, and in more modern times of CHARLES B. KING, are all familiar to lovers of art. MALBONE was one of the finest miniature painters in the world. When he visited England, he called upon BENJAMIN WEST, and after some conversation, WEST asked him why he came. "To perfect myself in painting," was the reply. "Sir, you can go home again, for a man that can paint such a picture as this (pointing to one of MALBONE's) need not come to England for instruction." His great picture of "The Hours," painted on ivory, is now owned by the Providence Atheneum, by whom it was purchased for $1,200. STUART has a reputation throughout the world. CLAGGETT lived many years in this town. He was formerly a clockmaker and excelled as an artist.

There are two distinguished artist-painters yet remaining at Newport—KING and STAIGG. Mr. KING spends his Winters in Washington and the Summer season in his native town. His gift of the vast collection of paintings in the Redwood Library will not soon be forgotten. Of STAIGG and his productions you in New-York are already well informed, Newport is often alluded to in connection with the "palmy days of LIGHTFOOT." Judge LIGHTFOOT came here from London on account of his health, and finding the climate so delightful, the situation of the place so attractive and the society so pleasant, that he resigned his office in London. He spent his time mostly in reading and sociality, and was one of the eminent men which rendered Newport deserving of its titles. He was once traveling from Newport to Connecticut, and was overtaken by a snow-storm without having an overcoat. He stopped at a tavern on the way for rest and refreshment, and the hostess, a good-natured but inquisitive old lady, propounded some questions. Where he was from? From Newport. Where he was bound? To visit the six nations. Had he no overcoat? He never wore one. How many children had he? Only nine. Whereupon she screamed and called her husband, "Here is a man with nine children and never wears an overcoat; when I've made you a dozen (overcoats) and we never had one!"

Among the illustrious sons of Newport, none more deserved that title than he whose name is indelibly linked with its history, and in a small degree with the history of New-Orleans, JUDAH TOURO, the eminent merchant and philanthropist. He was born in 1776, and he used to say his birth was greeted by the thunders of artillery, fired in honor of the Declaration of Independence. His father was a priest of the Synagogue Yeshuat Israel, erected here in 1762. Most of his education was received here. In 1801, he left for New-Orleans, and there, when the war broke out, he performed valuable services. If Boston can boast of a LAWRENCE, Newport can equally boast of a TOURO. He amassed an immense fortune, which he scattered liberally for good and worthy objects. In business he adhered rigidly to the cash system, and never ventured in any hazardous speculations. He was honest, faithful, just, and more than that, he was generous. He, with AMOS LAWRENCE, of Boston, subscribed each $10,000 to complete the Bunker Hill Monument, and subsequently, at a dinner in Faneuil Hall, this poetical sentiment was read:

"LAWRENCE and TOURO, united names,
Patriarch and Prophet press their equal claim;
Christian and Jew, they carry out one plan,
For tho' in different faith—each in heart a man!"

JUDAH TOURO, died in New-Orleans in 1854, and his dying injunction to be buried by the side of his mother at Newport, was obeyed, and there they lie together, and a kindred dust covers them both.

LAW REPORTS.

GENERAL SESSIONS.

Recorder Barnard on the Law of Libel—A Grand Jury Impanneled—Felonious Assaults and Grand Larcenies.

The proceedings of the Court of General Sessions, yesterday morning, commenced with the impanneling of the Grand Inquest, as follows:

CHARLES AUGUSTUS DAVIS, Foreman.

Ledyard Avery,	Asahel H. Bartlet,	Samuel Down,
Samuel Dawson,	George B. English,	Samuel Knapp,
Henry Lewis,	John T.B. Maxwell,	John W. Miller.
James W. Otis,	John M. Reed,	Jos'h Thompson,
William Wood,	Joseph Applegate,	John Aitken,
Wm. Cromwell,	Edward Carter,	Jas. J. Deforest,
Edward R. James,	William H. Merritt.

The customary oath having been duly administered, Recorder BARNARD, the presiding Judge, charged the Grand Jury on the points prescribed by the Statute, to wit: the Usury, Extortion and Liquor laws, and the law against illegal voting and bribery at elections. He also made special allusion to Stephen H. Branch's Daily Hand, and other scurrilous papers, in the following terms:

In addition to these several matters, I will call your attention to the law of libel, as there seems to be very erroneous ideas on the subject prevailing among all classes of society. Every person may freely speak, write and publish his sentiments on all subjects, being responsible only for the abuse of that right. It is the undoubted right of individuals to expose corruption in public matters, and also to criticise and comment on the official and judicial acts of all public officers. But this is only to be done in a calm and temperate manner. The real facts of the case must form the basis of the criticism, and that and the comments should be a fair and impartial argument on those facts. These limits, however, should not be transcended. An attack on private character, the use of opprobrious epithets, sarcasm, a tirade of abuse, a garbled statement of a transaction, holding up to ridicule, contempt or censure any of the actors therein; a pretended criticism, the whole tenor and object of which is to subject a person to ridicule, contempt and censure, rather than to point out to and convince such person of his error, and guard others or the public from the results of such error, when written, are all libelous and indictable, and will subject a person to punishment for a libel, unless he can prove the truth of sufficient facts to justify the invectives and remarks complained of; or in cases, where, the libel charged consists in the assertion of specific facts, the truth of such facts. These remarks apply as well to the Press as to individuals. I am led to call your attention to this subject because some evil-minded and evil-disposed persons have set on foot, and are now carrying on, vile and libelous journals, whose sole object seems to be, and undoubtedly is, to support themselves and their journals by forcing timid individuals to pay large sums of money in order to protect themselves from charges untrue, malicious and defamatory. It is your duty to promptly indict all such cases, in order that the only remedy which will be effective may be resorted to for the purpose of preventing a recurrence of the same. Such remedy is by imprisonment in a penitentiary, and not a fine. Every one who has a good character is desirous of preserving the same for his own and his friends' benefit, and it is and will be the duty of this Court at all times to protect, with its power and authority, any unjust and wicked attempt to injure or destroy it. Society needs, as a corrector, a bold, watchful and independent Press, managed by men of integrity and character, but not slandering papers, controlled and carried on by vagabonds and worthless defamers.

The Grand Jury having been conducted to their room, John Duffy, aged 23 years, pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny. On September the 16th he stole a watch, valued at $50, and a vest and other articles, valued at $7, from one Hugh Kane. He was sentenced to two years in the State Prison.

John Snapps indulged in schnapps on August 3, and playfully abstracted his friend David Spicer's watch. There was no testimony angainst him warranting a charge of larceny, and he was at once acquitted.

Michael Flood, aged 20, Michael Grant, aged 21, Cornelius Quinn, aged 20, and Timothy Welsh, aged 24, were charged with assaulting Patrick Delaney, a bar-tender at a saloon situated on the corner of Fourteenth-street and Eleventh-avenue, on the 17th August. They struck him with a club, and fired a pistol at him, but his injuries were not serious. In fact, it would appear that he was more frightened than hurt. The whole affair was very trivial. Flood and Grant were remanded for sentence. Quinn and Welsh were discharged.

Two boys, named Samuel Clark, aged 17, and Robert Fisher, aged 12 years, were charged with felonious assault. A girl of 13 years of age, named Mary Noonan, was dancing, with other little girls, on the sidewalk at the corner of Mulberry and Bleecker streets, at 8½ P. M. on the 9th of September, when the accused boys, accompanied by a girl named Mary Gough, attacked her, beat her and kicked her, inflicting upon her such injuries that she died, as is alleged, from their effects, ten days afterwards. The cause of the attack was an old family grudge. Fisher was acquitted, and Clark convicted. Sentence deferred till the last day of term.

DECISIONS IN ADMIRALTY ON APPEAL.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT—OCT. 4.—BEFORE JUDGE NELSON.

Elisha Baker vs. The Ship Potomac.—This was an action to recover for repairs, furnished to the ship in this port. A decree was rendered in the District Court in favor of the libellant, and on a reference to a Commissioner, he reported due for the repairs $3,396 18. To this report the claimant filed exceptions, as follows: "The Commissioner allowed for an amount far exceeding any amount of work performed and materials furnished," and "the Commissioner erred in admitting evidence for libellant, and also erred in rejecting evidence offered for respondent." These exceptions were overruled by the District Court, and a decree rendered in favor of the libellant, from which the claimants appealed to this Court. The question of the jurisdiction of the District Court to enforce the claim was taken on the appeal, but it was admitted that the vessel, though not under charter at the time, sailed thereafter on a foreign voyage.

NELSON, C. J.—The only question in this case arises on the report of the Commissioner in the Court below, in respect to the amount of repairs made and materials furnished to the ship Potomac. The Court below placed no decision upon a defect in the exceptions taken to the report, either to matters settled in the decree, and not before the Commissioner, or not sufficiently specific and pointed to raise the exception. I am inclined to think the Court right on both grounds stated. But, independently of this answer, I have looked into the evidence before the Commissioner, without regard to the formal objections, and am satisfied that the weight of it sustains the report; at least the evidence furnished on the part of the respondent, tending to reduce the amount and value of the repairs, and to change the terms upon which they were made, is so questionable that I am not disposed to interfere with the report, as the witnesses were personally before the officers making it, who had a better opportunity to determine the degree of credibility to be given to them than we can have. The extent and cost of the repairs seem to have been established in the usual way, and with reasonable satisfaction. The rebutting proof is very general and indefinite. Decree affirmed.

For libelant, Messrs. Benedict, Burr and Benedict; for appellant, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue.

SHIPMENT OF LARD IN HOT WEATHER—RESPONSIBILITY OF CARRIER.

William Nelson et al. vs. John O. Woodruff. John O. Woodruff vs. William Nelson.—NELSON C. J.—The libel was filed in the first case by the libellants, to recover freight upon a shipment of 1,099 barrels and 61 tierces of lard on the ship Maid of Orleans, from New-Orleans to this port, in July and August, 1854.

It was filed in the second case by the consignee, against the respondent, to recover damages for a loss of part of the lard in the course of the shipment. Both cases depend upon the same evidence and were heard together in the Court below and in this Court.

It is not denied but that a very heavy loss of the lard occurred on board the vessel during the voyage, which was discovered upon discharging the cargo at this port, a loss of about 60,000 pounds, worth some $6,000.

The bills of lading are in the usual form, "shipped in good order," &c., "damages of the sea, &c., excepted," to which is added at the foot "contents unknown."

The weather was excessively hot in New-Orleans in the month of July, 1854, when the lard was put on board, and when delivered by the shipper on the levee, which was done morning and evening, to avoid the heat of the day. The delivering, however, was continued in the morning till 10 o'clock A. M., and renewed between 3 and 4 P. M., and, according to the weight of the testimony, the lard was taken on board of the vessel with all reasonable dispatch. When taken on board, it was found to be in a liquid state, and a few of the barrels leaked so badly at the levee that the hoops had to be tightened, and some of the barrels were found to be partially empty.

The great deficiency in the quantity that occurred in the course of the shipment is attributable to the leakage of the casks, which, the shipowner insists, is chargeable alone to the condition and character of the article, and to the excessive hot weather at the time of the shipment, and during the voyage.

The proofs in the case taken at New-Orleans and at this port are very full and satisfactory that the lard was properly and skillfully stowed, both in respect to the place in the hold of the vessel and the manner of the stowage. And it is further shown that all due and proper care was taken of it in the course of the shipment; and I perceive nothing in the evidence, when critically examined and weighed, in the appearance or condition of the packages when discharged at this port, going to impair the proof of the libellants on his head. The barrels and tierces appear to have been well made and with proper material, and to have withstood the shipment, without any substantial injury, with the exception that the seams were opened, and hence the leakage. But this is accounted for by nearly all the witnesses experienced in the shipment of the article, as resulting from the effect of the hot weather, in connection with the tendency of the melted lard to shrink the staves and loosen the hoops. The proof is that the months of July and August, 1854, were hot beyond those of many preceding years, and that on opening the hatches, after the arrival of the vessel at this port, the heat in the hold was so excessive that no person could remain in it.

It is well settled that the shipper takes the risks attendant upon a shipment of cargo of this character from the heat of the weather, unless some neglect or fault can be charged upon the vessel contributing to the loss, (12 How., 272,) and I must say, after a very careful examination of the evidence, that, in my judgment, no such negligence or fault has been established.

The decrees of the Court below must be affirmed.

For the appellants, Messrs. Beebe, Dean and Donohue; for appellees, Mr. Stoughton and Mr. Goodman.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT—OCT. 5.

The October Term of this Court was opened this morning by Judge BETTS. A Grand Jury had been summoned, and eighteen were in attendance. Chas. S. Francis was appointed Foreman. Judge BETTS charged them briefly, as there were no cases of importance to come before them. The calendar of Admiralty causes was not called to-day. The Court thereupon adjourned.

Taxes on the Mutual Life Insurance Co.

APPLICATION FOR REMISSION OF TAXES—PERSISTENT TAX COMMISSIONERS—ANOTHER MANDAMUS.

The People on the Relation of the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company vs. The Board of Supervisors.—The question involved in this action has been before passed upon by Mr. Justice CLERKE. The application was for a peremptory mandamus against the Board of Supervisors to compel them to remit the taxes assessed upon this Company, except such an amount as should be assessed upon $100,000 of their accumulated stock in the hands of policy holders. In 1855 the Legislature passed an act absolving the Company from liability to taxation upon more than $100,000 of these accumulations; but in the same year, as also in 1856, the Tax Commissioners assessed the Company upon $2,000,000. The Company then obtained an order against the Board of Supervisors, to show cause why they should not remit all the assessment except upon the amount contemplated by the act of 1855. In return to that order the Board said the act of 1855 did not affect the power of the Tax Commissioners in their proceedings, and in regard to the assessment complained of. That return was quashed by Judge Clerke for insufficiency, and a peremptory mandamus was ordered, compelling the Board to remit. The present application was made before Mr. Justice INGRAHAM for a similar order, in regard to three subsequent years. His Honor said he should regard Justice Clerke's opinion on the merits as just, and grant the mandamus, sending the cases all up together. R. G. Andrews, who appeared for the defendants, desired the Court to express some opinion in the matter, as he wished to learn the views of the Court in regard to it. Justice INGRAHAM, however, declined to pass upon the merits of the question, and granted the application.

John E. Devlin for relators; R. F. Andrews for respondents.

Case of Dr. Nott and R. W. Lowber.

STATEMENT OF THE POINTS—THE CASE GIVEN TO THE JURY.

Duncan, Sherman & Co. vs. Eliphalet Nott and Robert W. Lowber.—This case, it will be recollected, is brought on a draft of Dr. Nott's, accepted by Mr. Lowber. Mr. Lowber's defence was a contract by which he had agreed with the plaintiffs to convey certain real property in Brooklyn in payment of the claim, to which the plaintiffs answered that the property was more heavily incumbered than he had represented, and that they had therefore declined to take it.

It appeared that the plaintiffs had taken a conveyance on the strength of the defendant's representations, and had caused it to be recorded; and afterward discovered that instead of there being only two mortgages upon it, amounting to $9,000, it was liable for taxes and assessments to the amount of $225, and incumbered by judgments amounting to upwards of $33,000. Mr. Lowber being notified by the plaintiffs that they should not hold themselves bound by the contract unless he obtained releases for the property from these incumbrances, he promised to do so. Time passed, and still the title was not made clear; and after waiting what they deemed a reasonable time for the removal of the incumbrances, the plaintiffs notified him that they should not accept the transfer, but held themselves in readiness to return the property and the incomes of it. The present action had been commenced before this compromise was made; and upon the failure to fulfill it, the plaintiffs proceeded with the cause.

Mr. Lowber relied on the fact that some of the alleged incumbrances were not legally liens, that others he was about to have released when the plaintiffs notified him that they would not hold the property, and his counsel contended that as the plaintiffs had once actually accepted the transfer as security, it was not competent for them to repudiate it.

The Court, however, charged the jury in accordance with the position of the plaintiff's counsel that the liability of the plaintiffs to be bound by the contract depended on the defendant's performance of its conditions. The jury are to bring in a sealed verdict to-day.

Mr. Laroque for plaintiff; Mr. Noyes for defendant.

Action for Causing the Death of a Child.

THE SCALDING CASE—MOTION TO DISMISS DENIED.

James Black vs. The New-York Wire Railing Company.—This was an action to recover $2,000 of the defendants for the loss of a child, five years old, alleged to have been scalded to death on the 29th of January last, by reason of the negligence of the defendants in allowing the steam to escape from a pipe which projected out into an adjacent gutter. This case now came up before the Hon. Justice INGRAHAM, at Chambers, on the application of the defendants' attorney to dismiss the complaint, on the ground that it did not state facts enough to sustain the action. Motion denied.

A. R. Lawrence, Jr., for plaintiff; D. E. Wheeler, for defendants.

Opinions.

ERIE RAILROAD COUPONS CASE.

James Brown and others, Trustees, &c., vs. The New-York and Erie Railroad Company and others.—INGRAHAM, J.—The plaintiffs, Brown and Davis, as trustees for the holders of the third, fourth and fifth mortgage bonds, and Drew as a holder of the fourth mortgage bonds, commenced this action, and obtained the appointment of a Receiver for the benefit of all represented by them.

A motion is now made by Davis, one of the trustees, for an order directing the Receiver to pay the interest coming due upon the fourth mortgage bonds out of the receipts of the road, to the exclusion of other indebtedness, and against the consent of some of the trustees on the prior mortgages.

The ground upon which such an application is made is, that the bonds secured by the fourth mortgage are so drawn that the principal becomes due and payable, if the interest is not paid.

The application is opposed by a trustee under the second mortgage, Mr. Joseph Walker, and by the receiver.

Independent of the fact, as stated by the receiver, that the amounts to be paid as provided for by the order appointing a receiver exceed $1,000,000, and which would of itself prevent this payment, I see no propriety in granting this motion.

The receiver was appointed to protect the rights of the prior bondholders as well as those interested under the fourth mortgage. In point of priority, those having the first claims are entitled to payment out of these moneys before the holders of the fourth mortgage bonds; and I know of no rule of law or equity which allows the funds of an insolvent corporation to be diverted from a proper application of them, because it may be deemed for ulterior purposes to make such a use of them.

It is said that these bonds will at once become payable in full unless the interest is paid, but such a result would not authorize a misapplication of the funds received by the receiver. No serious injury could happen therefrom, because the bonds held under the second mortgage have already become due, amounting to $4,000,000, and a foreclosure by them would be more productive of evil than proceedings on behalf of those subsequent in their claims. The division of funds so received would naturally lead to such a foreclosure, and, instead of operating beneficially, it seems to me that the want of confidence in the proper appropriation of the moneys received by the receiver, which such a course would naturally induce, would be productive of serious injury, instead of the beneficial results contemplated by those making the motion. The motion must be denied.

RECEIVER'S JUDGMENT SET ASIDE.

Selover, Receiver, vs. Forker.—INGRAHAM, J.—This motion cannot be made for any irregularity, even if there were such a ground, because the irregularity complained of is not stated in the notice.

The only question therefore is, whether the defendant has shown any good cause for opening the judgment.

At best, the excuse is, that both he and his attorney neglected to attend to the case; the one, because the Receiver had, through a trick practiced upon him, been induced to discontinue the action, which discountenance was afterwards set aside; and the other, because he did not know where his client was to be found. Under ordinary circumstances, such excuses ought to be of no avail, but as this action is brought by a Receiver, who has no knowledge of the validity of the claim, except that which is obtained from others, and as the defendant denies positively any indebtedness whatever, I have, with much hesitation, come to the conclusion to allow the defendant a trial upon the following terms, viz.: the judgment and execution to stand as security, and the Sheriff to be allowed to proceed on the execution, unless the defendant secures him thereon, the defendant to withdraw his appeal from the order of Judge Clerke, and to pay all costs of the reference and of the subsequent proceedings, and $10 costs of this motion.

If these conditions are not complied with in ten days from service of notice of this order, the same is denied.

A BOSTON LAWYER ATTACKING THE BENCH.—The Hon. JOHN C. PARK is one of the oldest and ablest of the criminal lawyers of Boston; a wag as well as an astute counselor, and a defiant individual as well as the leader of the Boston Bar. The new rule of the Superior Court of the State, which requires counsel to stand during the examination of witnesses, has provoked a vigorous opposition from the Bar, and Mr. PARK assumes the offensive, in a card addressed to the Profession in the State. He alludes to the fact that a majority of the new Judges are fresh from the ranks of the Bar, without judicial experience, and details a controversy which he had with the Bench a few days ago. While Mr. PARK declares that he "has no desire to ruffle a single hair of the judicial ermine," he nevertheless objects to the arbitrary ruling of the Court, for the following reason among others:

"Because it is as unreasonable, and therefore arbitrary, as would be an attempt to restrain the ebullitions of temper in members of the Bar by directing them to conduct their cases, with their feet in a tub of cold water."

The Bostonians appear amazed at the audacity of this attack, and the affair is a staple of the newspapers' gossip.

The Times for California.

The Times for California, designed for circulation in Spanish America, California, Oregon, Washington, British Columbia and the Sandwich Islands, embracing a complete Digest of Events in America and Europe during the past fortnight, will be issued This (Wednesday) Morning, in ample time for the steamship Northern Light, which sails for Aspinwall at 2 P. M. The Mail closes at the Post-office at 1 o'clock. Price of the paper, in a stout wrapper, ready for mailing, 5 cents a copy. Agents will send in their orders as early as possible.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The indomitable fillibuster, Gen. Walker, has again eluded the United States officials, and is by this time on his way to Nicaragua. A clearance from New-Orleans for the steamship Philadelphia was applied for yesterday morning, with the understanding that she was to convey Gen. Walker and a number of his followers to the Chiriqui Gold Mines or Graves. The application was refused, and in the afternoon the party embarked on a vessel which was in waiting below the city, and set sail, as was generally understood, for Nicaragua. Harry Maury, who became notorious in a previous expedition, is in command of the vessel. It is a significant fact that the names of Gen. Wheat, Adjutant Smith and Capt. Fersdorff, of the Thirteenth Regiment, are among those of the passengers by the Baltic, which leaves to-day for Aspinwall. They sail ostensibly for Mexico. At Washington the affair has excited utter consternation in official quarters. All is uncertainty and apprehension.

The mails by the Hungarian, whose arrival at Quebec has been announced, reached this City yesterday afternoon. Our London files extend to the 21st ult. In the matter of the San Juan boundary dispute, the English journals generally condemn the occupation of the island by Gen. Harney as a violation of the principles of public law, but they do not apprehend any misunderstanding between the two countries. Some further light is thrown upon the action of our countrymen in the late Chinese disturbances. Their humanity towards wounded British seamen, combined with their strict neutrality in the pending dispute, are both deserving of all praise. The selections given from French journals on this subject will be read with interest.

Later advices from Northern Mexico are received. Degollado, it appears, has gone south with three thousand men. His precise destination is not known. Gen. Woll, who had suffered severe losses in his recent victory over the Liberals, was making efforts to reinforce his army. Meantime Coronado, who recently captured Tepic, was expected soon to receive hostile attentions at the hands of Marquez, who was marching south to attack him.

Kansas yesterday decided the question of the acceptance or rejection of the State Constitution formed by the Convention at Wyandotte, and, from the complexion of all the returns thus far received, its adoption is more than probable. Leavenworth, Atchison, and other towns heard from, give majorities in its favor.

Advices from San Francisco to the 12th ult., received by the Overland Mail, confirm the previous news of the success of the Lecompton Democrats in the State Election. Their candidates for Congress are also elected, and their majority in the Legislature will be large. In San Francisco the Peoples' Reform Ticket was elected by a majority of from one to three thousand. A challenge was reported to have passed from Judge Terry to Senator Broderick, which is supposed to have been accepted, as it was rumored that a meeting between them had been prevented by the Police. Business in San Francisco was generally characterized by dullness.

The political waters at Albany were profoundly stirred yesterday. In the first place, there was the Executive Committee of the American Convention at Utica in great strength, organizing the party, passing resolutions, and uttering an address to partisan supporters, and in their absence, to the world at large. And, secondly, at evening, was the long promised meeting intended to afford the Democracy of the City and County to vent their enthusiasm for the nominations at Syracuse. The speaking at this latter gathering was afforded principally by Messrs. John A. Dix, and Daniel S. Dickinson. Ex-Gov. Seymour, who was to represent the connecting link between the Hards and Softs, being unavoidably absent.

The score thus far points to the irretrievable defeat of the American players in the International Cricket Match. Ten thousand spectators were on the ground yesterday. The All-England Eleven gave way to the Twenty-two after having made 156 runs, and the latter at the close of the play last evening hod scored thirty-eight. The English players take their benefit on Thursday and Friday.

Before the Board of Supervisors, yesterday, Messrs. Kennedy and Voorhis explained what they respectively had said, done and omitted to do, with regard to the appointment of a Board of Registration. The report of the Committee on Criminal Courts and Police, in favor of paying bills amounting to $1,532 54 for fitting up the office of the District-Attorney, was recommitted because Mr. Little said he had signed the report "to get rid of it," and after auditing a number of small bills the Board adjourned for a week. At the meeting of the Board of Governors of the Almshouse, yesterday, there was not any business of public interest transacted, with the exception of the passage of a resolution calling on the Comptroller for $25,000 for the New-Island Hospital Building.

Recorder Barnard, in charging the Grand Jury, in the Court of General Sessions, directed their attention particularly to the present state of the law of libel, with special reference to some scurrilous papers that have recently been, or are at present, in course of publication. It is rumored that Branch, who is already a fugitive from justice, will be extensively indicted by the Grand Jury, during this session of the Court, for various libels.

The Convention of Baptists called together yesterday for that purpose at the Church in Broome-street, organized a Baptist Sunday School Union, which is intended to embrace the schools of that denomination at large. About one hundred Delegates attended.

Mr. Meagher's lecture on Dean Swift was delivered last night in the Cooper Institute, to an audience unprecedentedly large and sympathetically enthusiastic. His portraiture of the Dean of St. Patrick's was the very reverse of that of Mr. Thackeray—the one representing him as all selfishness, the other as all blunt honesty.

The Mozart Hall Democracy met last evening by delegates, at the headquarters in Broadway, and made the following nominations: Judge of the Supreme Court—Wm. H. Leonard; Justice of the Superior Court—James Moncrief; Judge of the Court of Common Pleas—Charles P. Daly. The two latter are renominations and were made by acclamation. For Justice of the Supreme Court the vote stood: Wm. H. Leonard, 80; J. J. Roosevelt, 27.

At the Bank Clearing-house yesterday the Associated Banks of the City held their annual meeting—the sixth since the clearing system was established—and reorganized, by rotation, the whole of their standing committees. In the Stock market there was a further decline of one per cent. on the railway share list; State stocks a small fraction lower; railway bonds steady. The Money market steady for demand loans and short paper, but dearer on six months' bills by half per cent.

The sales of Flour were less than the receipts, and as receivers evinced a disposition to press their supplies on the market, prices declined. Wheat was more freely dealt in, partly by shippers, at, however, easier rates. Corn advanced a shade, with very light stocks and limited sales. Cotton was inactive. Coffee and Molasses were in fair demand. Sugars were moderately inquired for. Provisions were unsettled. Pork and Beef favored buyers. Lard improved. Spices were somewhat brisker. Iron attracted more attention. The movements in other branches of business were not important.

The French Press Still Fettered.

The Duke of Padua, writing in the name of the Emperor of the French, has formally declared that no change has been made, and that none, at least for the moment, is contemplated in the regulations of the French Press, as established by the laws of 1852. With this official publication, the visions which for a moment had smiled on the journalism of France, of a returning Saturnian reign of free thought and free speech, already begin to fade away; and Paris, the busy brain of the Empire, subsides again from the ferment of hope and activity which followed the general amnesty of August, into a sort of apathetic discontent, which is but a perilous parody of peace. What the motives may have been by which the Emperor was led thus to disappoint the expectations which had been raised by his political course since peace was concluded at Villafranca, does not yet very clearly appear. On the face of things, however, this renewed denial to the intellect of France of the right to exercise itself upon the fortunes of the nation must strike every dispassionate observer of French affairs as a serious blunder; and this with the more emphasis that the Duke of Padua's circular seems to have been issued as a sort of official reply to a very striking article which had appeared the day before in the liberal-conservative Journal des Débats, setting forth the dangers to France of the "disease of silence" under which the country had for seven years been laboring, and indulging in anticipations, at once measured and ardent, of the advantages that must inevitably flow in upon the sovereign and the people alike from unsealing of the fountains of public thought and opinion. The Journal des Débats had called public attention with skillful significance to the action of the Government in two very important crises, as proving the paramount importance of general discussion and reflection to the national welfare. The Emperor himself, said the Journal des Débats, found it desirable to supply the want of an untrammelled journalism by elaborate explanations of his own. First, in regard to that famous colloquy of New-Year's Day, with the Austrian Minister at the Tuileries, which first opened the eyes of Europe to the approaching tempest beyond the Alps; and afterwards in the development of the true nature and results of that mysterious agreement of Villafranca, by which the said tempest, at its height of raging, was so suddenly and so singularly appeased. In each of these instances, the Emperor did indeed become his own editor. He put his meaning in all possible favorable lights before Europe and his own people. He contended for the wisdom and justice of his own proceedings, both in making and in ending the Italian war, as earnestly as if he were an advocate retained for his own cause. He appeared to feel that he was the elect of France not merely to wield the vast executive power o his high station, but also to enlighten his national constituency on every point of his national policy. To all this no objection could perhaps be offered. But it would not be easy to point out any valid reasons which ought to have weight with such a ruler in determining him to monopolize the field of political discussion. Certainly the Duke of Padua, in the Moniteur, has found no such reasons. His circular is calm in tone, and the regulations to which it alludes are not absolutely inconsistent with the enjoyment of a large political liberty by the inhabitants of the country to which they apply during any period of great political or social excitement. The days of 1852 were days of trouble, anxiety and uncertainty. It may have been necessary then to restrain the liberty of political discussion in France, just as it was necessary to restrain the same liberty in America during our Revolutionary crisis; just as it is found necessary now to silence the same liberty in Tuscany. "Whosover in Tuscany," says Signor Ricasoli, in a recent circular to the Prefects of that country, "shall attempt to express his own views, under any pretext, and to thrust forward any banner but the banner of united Italy, shall be severely repressed by the authorities."

Language like this may be warranted by circumstances like those in which Italy now is struggling towards her national independence and freedom. Action based on such language may have been warranted in the France of 1852 by the serious perturbations of all social order, and of all political feeling in the Empire.

But surely the times have changed in respect to all this. Surely France has learned by this time, if she is ever to learn it, whether the institutions of the Empire are or are not suited to her actual necessities, whether they do or do not fit the genius of her people; whether, in a word, they are radically strong and susceptible of growth, or radically weak and destined to decay. The Empire can hardly be an experiment any longer, if it is ever to be anything more than an experiment. It has borne sharper tests than any which the discussions of the Press can apply to it. It has been tried by the demands of peace and not found wanting, for it has carried France through great financial crises with more ease to her commercial interests and less damage to her commercial reputation than any other nation. It has been tried by the exigencies of war and not found wanting, as witness Alma and Sebastopol, Magenta and Solferino. If any Government has existed in France since the Revolution of 1789 which might fearlessly confide itself to the chances of free and enlightened discussion, the second Empire ought to be that Government. It is at least historically certain that no previous Government during all these years has rested upon so broad an original basis of popular election, and that none has done so much for the material development of France, or for the elevation of her moral prestige among nations. If the Duke of Padua's circular expresses any deliberate conviction founded on deliberate inquiries, it means that, with all these historical arguments in its favor, the Imperial Government feels itself still morally uncertain of the support of France. This is the sense, at least, in which that circular must unquestionably be interpreted by all thoughtful men beyond the French borders. Rightly or wrongly, it will be read as an open confession by a high functionary of the Napoleonic Government, that the Empire is still on trial. Read in this light, it will do more, we believe, to revive the hopes and to rekindle the resolution of the scattered revolutionary factions of France than could have been done by all the fury of Victor Hugo, all the bile of Ledru Rollin and all the sarcasm of Proudhon, had those fluent disorganizers been brought to abjure their mutual hatreds and their reciprocal contempt, and to devote themselves, with disinterested malevolence, to the publication of a journal in common.

The Appointment of Registrars.

The Journal of Commerce seems quite inclined to make itself the champion of the recent action of the Board of Supervisors in the appointment of Registrars. It speaks of the affair as one of the "adverse fortunes of war," —advises the Republicans to bear it with more composure, and apparently finds full justification for the action of the Democrats in the fact, that if all the Republicans had been present it would not have occurred. "The blame solely belongs," says the Journal, "upon the two Republicans who absented themselves from the meeting." If the Editor of the Journal would look at this proposition as a man, and not as a party politician,—and judge it by principle, and not by partisan feeling,—he could not fail to see that it is utterly dishonest and disgraceful. It may be very wrong for a man to expose his purse within reach of thieves:—but he can scarcely be held "solely to blame" if it happens to be stolen. He may merit no pity—but moral men should not make his negligence a justification of the theft.

So far as the party interests of the Republicans are concerned in this matter, we care just as little for it as the Journal of Commerce can. In that point of view it may be merely a game—in which the sharpest and least scrupulous wins, and in which the loser merits, as he meets, no sympathy. But there is certainly another phase of the question which an honest and independent journalist cannot disregard. The appointment of these six hundred Registrars—who are to sit as Judges, and upon whose decision rests the right of every man to vote—is a matter of public as well as of party interest. The community has a right to demand for such functions men of character, of reasonable intelligence and of clear integrity. What sort of men have the Supervisors given us? The principle upon which the leaders of the majority openly proclaimed their purpose to act, stamps the whole transaction as fraudulent and base. They would concede nothing to the public interest,—they would claim everything for their party advantage. One special object of the law is to put a stop to fraudulent naturalizations:—out of the 600 registrars who are to do this work, four hundred are Irish; one hundred and eighty-seven are not to be found in the Directory at all; seventy are set down as keepers of grog-shops; and some of the most notorious ruffians and political fighting-men figure upon the list.

Is this such a class of men as ought to preside over this important department of our government? Have the Supervisors done their duty to the City in making these appointments? Can any plea of party interest, of political resentment, or of tempting opportunity excuse the majority of that Board for thus trifling with a high public duty and prostituting powers placed in their hands for public uses, to the worst and most degrading service of factious partisanship? There are many things, questionable in themselves, but where the public interest does not greatly suffer and where the sense of justice and fairness is not grossly outraged, which party journals like the Journal may excuse without loss of character; but this does not seem to us to be one of them. Even in an age when partisanship swallows up nearly every thought of the public good, the action of the Board of Supervisors in this case is the most flagitious and unprincipled abuse of power we have encountered for years.

A Capital Movement.

A sort of revival is in progress in the ranks of the Democratic Party. The conviction has dawned upon the Democratic mind that the work of corruption and degradation has gone about as far as is consistent with its safety, to say nothing of its respectability. The régime of shoulder-hitters, contractors, political jobbers and Ward bullies is becoming a little too odious for the respectable portion of the party which has so long suffered and bled in their behalf. There has accordingly been a revolt of the respectability against the despotism of the ruffians. A meeting was held on Monday night at the Everett House, over which Mr. Wilson G. Hunt presided, and at which it was resolved that the dynasty of the Democratic Party should be changed, and that the men who furnish the money for the war should resume control of the campaign. The following gentlemen were appointed an Executive Committee for the purpose of carrying out the objects of the movement:

August Belmont,	Algernon S. Jervis,
B. M. Whitlock,	John J. Cisco,
Isaac Bell, Jr.,	Watts Sherman,
John H. Brower,	Moses Taylor,
Royal Phelps,	Charles Lamont,
George J. Forrest,	Schuyler Livingston,
Charles Yates,	Joseph Kernochan,
Myndert Van Schaaick,	Joshua J. Henry,
James Lee.

These are all good names,—and they represent an immense amount of money, and of both political and personal influence. Whether they will wield it effectually or not, depends upon circumstances. If they suppose the whole work is done when their organization has been completed, the movement will be a dismal failure, and Muscle will still carry the day over Money. But if they will go to work with vigor and discretion, they can make their money and influence tell upon their political prospects and the public good.

As things now are, the organization of the Democratic Party is in the hands of its most reckless, unprincipled and corrupt members. The men who control it,—who pack its Conventions, designate its delegates, select its candidates and dictate its action—began political life as hungry camp-followers, thankful for any bone that might be thrown them; and they have at last taken command of the whole army, and use it for the wholesale pillage and plunder which makes them rich. The men whose names are given above have actually come to be the mere serfs and tools of the rowdies and ruffians in the Democratic ranks. The whole party has lost character and reputation, and is threatened with the more substantial loss of power, by the extreme of degradation to which it has thus been allowed to sink.

What particular line of action this Committee propose to pursue for the accomplishment of their ends, we are not aware. We presume they will aim at the outset to reform their party, instead of making war upon it. Their first endeavor ought to be to control the nominations for City officers, and to secure the selection of men as Democratic nominees, in whose honesty, ability and devotion to the public good the whole community may repose confidence. Our citizens should not, in the present disastrous condition of our City government, be asked to vote for any man for a City office, whose integrity and firmness are not beyond suspicion. The public sense of justice and of decency has been outraged in this matter long enough. It is quite time we had a reform, and we welcome this movement as an auspicious beginning. Let those concerned see to it that it is followed up with vigor and discretion.

Oysters and the Union.

The marvelous discovery of a genuine oyster fundum in Long Island Sound, and within the jurisdiction of New-York, whereof all Fulton Market and the cellars of Broadway "do ring from side to side," when contemplated from the point of view of our national politics, threatens the most serious consequences. In our joy of so many new privileges born into this oyster-eating world, we have rather rashly overlooked the relation of oysters to the Union, or rather of the Union to oysters. In point of fact, after cotton and the Constitution—(we print these honored names in the order of the precedence which they enjoy in the popular reverence)—after cotton and the Constitution, oysters are the hope of the confederacy. As thus: Nothing but the acquiescence of Gov. Wise and the State of Virginia in our actual institutions defers the dreadful day of wrath, in which the Capitol is to be burned with fire and Congress dissolved in blood. His proposition, we presume, no sane man will dispute. And nothing but the existence of the great Virginia fundum, for the fruits of which Virginia provides not mouths enough, and so graciously permits them to become an article of commerce with New-York, induces Gov. Wise and the State of Virginia to acquiesce in our actual institutions. It is, therefore, as plain as plain can be that we are on the eve of great events, and that we must eat our newly-acquired bivalves, not only with lemon and pepper, but with tears and terror likewise. For now that New-York can stand upon her own fundum, she will meddle no more with the fundum of Virginia. Virginia, finding her fundum neglected, will lend an ear more readily than ever to the insinuations of the Secessionist sirens, and the deluge will arrive.

There remains one hope, however, and but one, of salvation. Have we patriotism enough to sacrifice our oysters to the manes of our ancestors and the hopes of our posterity? If so, why not transfer our fundum bodily to the waters of South Carolina? The combined influence of her cotton and her oyster trade might have a pacifying effect upon the temper of this red planet in our sky, that has so long been straining to "shoot madly from its place," and in this way the fundum which threatens to yawn for our destruction would be made the basis of a new and more durable federation.

The idea is worth thinking of, especially while the flavor of our new oysters remains as problematical as it now appears to be. That the fundum can be moved, let no man doubt. Did not that luxurious Roman, Lucullus, plant a fundum on the top of his Pincian palace, in the heart of the Eternal City? And are the "modern Romans" less audacious and less capable of grand strokes than their antique prototypes?

The Fillibustering Flea.

It is a notable evidence of our great commercial prosperity that our Collectors of Customs are, as a rule, so much absorbed in gathering the dues of the Government that they quite lose the power of collecting their own wits in a way to be useful to themselves or others. To-day the information reaches us that the Mantelini of pirates, Mr. William Walker, has for the sixth or seventh time "eluded" our neutrality laws, and, giving Collector Hatch of New-Orleans the slip, has gone off in a steamer to Nicaragua with a new batch of demons, worse than himself, there to enter once more into that unhappy country, which was supposed so short a time since to have been so thoroughly swept and garnished and cleaned of him and his forever. We must, of course, await further developments before commenting upon the responsibility of our Government in respect to this fresh scandal; but it would really seem to be tolerably clear that if Mr. Buchanan hopes to expire officially in peace and honor, he must bend whatever energies he possesses or can command to the extinction of this great fillibustering flea, whose annoying industry and disproportionate agility will never be quenched until he shall have finally been firmly caught and nipped between the Presidential thumb and the British forefinger.

The San Juan Affair.—The English journals generally compliment the American Press on the tone of forbearance and moderation with which it has discussed the San Juan differences. We wish our cousins would praise us less and imitate us more. When they talk about Gen. Harney's movement as "one of those acts of piracy" by which the United States are in the habit of settling disputes with weaker neighbors, and urge the necessity of at once chastising "the licensed ruffians of the Federal army," they do not in the least facilitate the pacific adjustment of the dispute. We have not the slightest apprehension that any war will grow out of the controversy. If Mr. Buchanan had intended at any time to insist upon our extreme rights in that quarter, he would not have sent Gen. Scott to reap the honors of so doing. We regard the fact that he was ordered thither as at least presumptive evidence that the British claim will be conceded. But it is scarcely worth while for the English journals to presume upon this fact so much in advance. We should be sorry to have our satisfaction at the preservation of peace marred by any recollections of needless insult from the other side.

Another Ticket.—The New-York Tablet, one of the New-York organs of the Roman Catholics, is considerably excited against the American Party for having nominated a State ticket at Utica. It proposes as an offset, that "Catholic and Adopted Citizen voters select for the recipients of their suffrages those candidates on the Republican and Democratic lists who have been thrown aside by the Utica jugglers, and who are consequently uncontaminated by even the suspicion of Know-Nothing approval." As the Americans did not profess to make up their eclectic ticket with the slightest reference to "American" principles, it is not easy to see any necessity for such a counter movement as the one proposed. The Catholics themselves could scarcely wish for a more complete desertion of the Know-Nothing standard and platform than was effected by the representatives of that party at Utica.

Revelations of the Ruling Classes.—Bully after bully of those who professionally attended the Syracuse Convention, is furnishing us with his version of the affair in the shape of an affidavit. The "Benicia Boy" has already set before the public, under oath, the nature of his mission on that august occasion. The knocking down of Mr. Stryker, just as he was about to take the chair, was, however, one of the points which remained surrounded by some obscurity, though common report had the audacity to ascribe that exploit to a gentleman named Wood, and had the cruelty to add that he was a cousin of Fernando, who is commonly believed to be the head of the clan of that name. He has duly visited a Notary Public, and placed the result before an expectant public in yesterday's Times, in the shape of an affidavit, in which he frankly confesses that he attended the Convention to make a row and take part in the "excitement;" that he mounted the platform to push off somebody, conscientiously and honestly, and made a mistake in pushing Stryker off instead of pushing Alvord, and that he has no connection with the "concern over the way;" in other words, with Fernando's Mozart Hall.

This is all very well as far as it goes; but the nation waits for the affidavits of the remaining pugilists. We have not heard from "Andy Sheehan," or "Pat. Matthews," or "Billy Mulligan." Those of the fraternity who were there should swear at once, before any more time is allowed to elapse, that they were there, and the reasons why they were there, and those who were not there should swear to the fact, and the reason why, in like manner. It is most important, as Mr. Willis would say, that posterity should have the means of ascertaining which part, if any, these illustrious men have played in the great political crisis of our time. Let them "lift their visors" before a Commissioner of Deeds forthwith.

Catechetical:—Lesson for the Day—First Three Questions.—Our neighbors of the Tribune, becoming sensible of their own deficiencies, are in pursuit of information on topics of public interest. Naturally enough they come to us, and respectfully request replies to the following questions:

1. Does it [the Times] consider peaceful resistance to the establishment of Slavery in the Federal Territories "Northern sectionalism?"

2. Does it consider legal and peaceful efforts to terminate the existence of Slavery in the Southern States "Northern sectionalism?"

3. In other words—Does the Times deem the existence of Slavery in the Southern States beneficial to those States, or the diffusion of their "peculiar institution" over new Territories an end which those States should desire and labor to attain?

Answer to all three:—No, Sir!

If the Tribune will give us only three questions a day, and none of them are any harder than these, we will endeavor to keep it posted on the subject from month to month.

The Great Eastern Again.—The Coroner's Jury, as we have already stated, failed to fix the responsibility for the accident on board the Great Eastern upon any one. It was caused, unquestionably, by negligence on the part of the person in charge of the paddle engines,—but who that was no one seems to know. Mr. Dickson, the managing Engineer, testified at the inquest that, as to the paddle engines, he "never gave any order, or received any, in connection with their working;" and Mr. Scott Russell swore that, "during the trial trip, the paddle engines were not in any way under my control or superintendence." A Mr. Dillon writes to the Times giving both of these statements a flat contradiction. He states that he was on board the steamer, and repeatedly saw Mr. Dickson "actively engaged in giving orders and directions in the paddle-engine room;" and that "Mr. Scott Russell was on the paddle-box bridge during the greater part of the trip, actually in charge of the signal indicators by which orders are transmitted to the engineers below; he also from time to time sent his son, who stood beneath him, to the engine-room with orders." These are explicit contradictions,—and of course leave the whole matter in doubt.

What the War Cost.—The two months campaign in Italy can scarcely be said to have been a cheap amusement for any of the parties concerned. The Allgemeine Zeitung figures up the cost to the immediate parties to the war, and also to the neutral Powers who were required to make preparations for contingencies, in the following table:

Austria about	£20,000,000
France	20,000,000
Piedmont	4,000,000
Other Italian States	800,000
Russia	1,200,000
England	880,000
Germany	5,120,000
Total	£52,000,000

This makes the snug little aggregate of $260,000,000—or nearly one-third of the whole national debt of England.

Monumental.—Gov. Banks has sent a message to the Massachusetts Legislature recommending the erection of a public statue to the memory of Horace Mann. The Abolitionists, on the other hand, are demanding that the statue of Mr. Webster shall be removed, and endeavoring to make the question a political test. Massachusetts is a small State, but fortunately it is infinitely larger than some of the souls which inhabit it.

A Reminiscence.—Admiral Hope, who was repulsed at the Pei-ho, was Captain of the British frigate Endymion, which had the engagement with the President, commanded by Decatur, at the opening of the last war with England. After a long and sharp engagement, it will be remembered, the American vessel surrendered to the British Squadron.

The California Mails.

At 9 o'clock last night no decision had been reached in regard to the California Mails. We are assured by Mr. Postmaster Fowler, that all letters, &c., deposited in the Post-office, will be sent to California with the same regularity and certainty as heretofore. In this, Mr. Postmaster-General Holt, and his First-Assistant, Mr. King, both concur. These gentlemen are still in the City—having come on expressly to see that there is no mistake about the mails being duly dispatched.

The Monument at Lexington.—The Directors of the Lexington Monument Association held a meeting, on Monday, in the Rooms of the Board of Trade, Boston. The Hon. Edward Everett occupied the Chair. It was resolved to adopt as the idea of the contemplated monument the design of the minute man made by Mr. Hammatt Billings. This design represents a "minute man" leaving his plow in the furrow, seizing his musket, ball pouch and powder horn, and departing to the call of duty. It is to be bronze, 18 feet high. This is elevated upon a granite, octagon pedestal, 30 feet in height, which will be set with panels for such devices as may be desirable to engrave thereon. The whole height will be 48 feet. Messrs. Charles Hudson, Charles O. Whittemore, Samuel Chandler, Richard Frothingham, Jr., and George Lunt were appointed an Executive Committee, and the Hon. Edward Everett was appointed to prepare an address setting forth the objects of the Association, and soliciting public support.

An Appeal for Aid.—The Christian Advocate contains the following notice:

"The Rev. Jeremiah Bowman, a colored brother, and himself an emancipated slave, is now in the City soliciting money to redeem a brother from Slavery. He has unexceptionable testimonials of character and standing in the Church, and is entitled to full confidence. We recommend him and his cause to the humane upon whom he may call for aid."

Mr. Bowman requires about $650 more than he has thus far collected to accomplish his object. Any donations may be sent to him at No. 168 Church-street.

THE STATE FAIR.

Opening Day—Extraordinary Display of Cattle—Prospects and Programme—Picture of the Grounds, &c., &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Albany, Tuesday, Oct. 4, 1859—4 P. M.

Providence furnishes a magnificent day for the opening of the State Fair, and the Committee having the Fair in charge present at the opening a very creditable Fair for the prettiest day in October to shine upon. The Albany people and papers so well understand the art of blowing that it needed seeing to believe that one-half was true that they told of the extraordinary display about to be made on this occasion. But seeing is believing. The grounds lie about a mile and a half north of the city,—easily accessible to pedestrians, or through a cloud of dust by omnibuses. I compassed the route very comfortably by the Northern Railroad in 43 minutes from Albany this morning,—the 9 o'clock train, after getting well filled, concluding to wait till 9¼, and then waiting ten minutes, I suppose lest somebody should be left. Hereafter they promise to run up and down every half hour, from 9 A. M. to 6 P. M.

The Fair Grounds are inclosed by a tight board fence and flanked by the usual array of sheds, sheltering double-headed calves, monstrous oxen, big giantesses, and little jokers, and with tents under which sandwiches and lager, bitters, oyster stews and gingerbread are dispensed for your coppers. Inside there are ample facilities for getting to windward of a ravenous appetite, but otherwise no peddling. Through the grounds flow a stream of fresh drinkable water for the refreshment of man and beast.

The Fair opens to-day, and great multitudes of people are on the ground, yet everywhere resounds the clatter of preparation. Floral Hall begins to bloom with beauty, though at 10 o'clock it was almost empty. The shed however, even in its emptiness, was pleasant to look at—hung inside and out with wreaths, its rafters and beams trimmed with evergreens, and its walls fragrant with branches of cedar and pine and almost covered with "running ivy." By to-morrow this in itself would be worth a trip up from New-York in the New World—albeit that may involve a state-room already pre-occupied by mosquitoes and the wingless hemiptera, and such a rattling of rudder-chains all about you as if the Titans were above, below, and on both sides, and all ravishingly sea-sick.

There is a great gathering of large agricultural implements and machinery, but little of it yet in place and few exhibitors are ready to show what it can do, and how do it, better than its competitors. The Albany Mechanics' Institute has a shed about the size of Palace Garden, full of all manner of "powers" and "presses," engines and household utensils, and of all styles and breeds of mechanical devices, from a steam-engine down to a patent pin-head. Albany has laid herself out under this roof, and will probably pocket a world of premiums. Indeed, in every department Albany comes up strong—bound to make the most of an occasion which crams her hotels as if there were a City Railroad just ready to run through the Legislature, or a new batch of Harbor-masters were instantly to be appointed. The miscellaneous department, which includes everything that fails to get snugly in under any other head, will be full before sunset.

The grains, vegetables and dairy produce come up slowly, but the entry list being large, there will be no vacant tables by Wednesday night.

The stalls for horses are adorned with the names of some very extraordinary animals, but the heads of departments in this line are not yet on the ground. To-morrow the driving ring, 500 by 220 feet in area, will be lively with their display.

But in cattle the Fair is already immense. Such tremendous bulls, such sweet-breathed, pure-blood heifers, such glorious beef, and in such quantities were never—I take the word of the oldest visitor at State Fairs—gathered in one place inside the Empire State before. There is pure-blood enough to stock a new State in a year, each burly fellow with a pedigree half a column long in solid nonpariel. Mr. Wainwright, of Rhinebeck, Mr. Forbes, of Greenbush and Mr. Faile, of New-York, are strong in Devons; Mr. Morris, of Fordham, shows a remarkable lot of roan-colored Short-horns; Mr. Remington, of Cayuga, is abundant in Hereford. Men take off their hats as they approach Mr. Wainwright's magnificent imported one-year old Omer Pacha, or Mr. Conger's short-horn bull, Jacintha's Romeo. The managers have so placed the stables where the cattle are exhibited that they can be well viewed, broadside to. To this department of the show the multitude gather in crowds, and the bronzed farmers hardly restrain their enthusiasm. Botts missed it that he did not come on with his horse. If he has anything more inspiring than these blooded bulls, his Ashlanders would not stand alone in tendering him a nomination—for stock tells in this vicinity just now. By the way John A. Dix, who is to do the address on Friday, is advertised to assist Daniel S. Dickinson in a grand ratification of the Democratic ticket to-night, at the capitol.

Coming back to our muttons, there are wonderfully few sheep yet in. Mr. Mason, of Jefferson County, has four Saxony Bucks—exceedingly pretty fellows to look at. Mr. Youngham, of Westland Lake, has a fine long-wooled buck and ewe lambs. Wm. Chamberlain, of Red Hook, has 45 Silesian Merinos, and Mr. Conger a pen of imported Southdown ewes. Yet of the few exhibited, several of the bucks are valued at $1,000 each.

Swine are not popular. A few grunters adorn the pens, but very few. Poultry abounds, of all fabulous sizes and innumerable varieties. The Police arrangements are admirable. Mr. Bogart takes charge of the pens, and if any member looks disconsolate and lonely, he feeds him, free, into the best of spirits and humor. If the weather holds as it has opened there must be a tremendous dust on the road to-morrow, and a crush on the ground. GLAUCUS.

[By Telegraph.]

Albany, Tuesday, Oct 4.

Although it was not the first public day of the Fair, yet a large number of persons visited the grounds to-day. The weather was delightful, with a clear sun and cool air. There were ample accommodations to reach the grounds through a perfect wall of dust, by the common road or by means of the Northern Railroad, which runs trains to the doors of the Fair grounds, which are about one mile from the city. Up to 4 o'clock to-day, the entries had reached 3,330, which is far in advance of the same period in former years. The cattle exhibition promises to be a grand one, but the stock has not yet all arrived. Horses are in unusual numbers on the grounds, far ahead of former years. Vermont and Connecticut are liberally represented in this department by a larger number of Black Hawks and Morgans than usual. In Mechanics, Arts and Manufactures there will be a fine display, as the entries are numerous and the articles already here are of a superior description. The telegraph apparatus and the telegraphic alarm bell are put up, but were not worked to-day. To-morrow is the first day for admission of the public.

BROOKLYN INTELLIGENCE.

Board of Education.—A regular meeting of the Brooklyn Board of Education was held last evening. The first part of the session was occupied in disposing of a bill of about $250, presented by a carpenter for extra work on a school-house. It was finally referred to the Law Committee, with instructions to defend the suit, which had been commenced, to recover the amount of the bill. A petition for the use of a school room in which to hold a Sabbath School was sent back to petitioners, with information that to allow a room to be used for such a purpose would violate a rule of the Board. The Roman Catholic Orphan Asylum made application for the payment of $915, school money, alleged to be due since 1853 on a judgment of the Supreme Court, with interest. The subject was referred to a Special Committee. The Teachers' Committee presented their report recommending certain promotions and appointments. It was adopted, and the Board adjourned.

The Academy of Music.—All of the stock for the Brooklyn Academy of Music, but six or eight thousand dollars, had been taken up on Monday last, when the Board of Managers—not to have any further delay—became responsible for the balance, and the work of preparing the site for the building will be commenced this week. The plans for the building are ready, and the contracts will, doubtless, be signed to-day. The gentlemen who have charge of this work voluntarily made a pledge that, when the building is handed over to the stockholders, it shall be free from all incumbrance. The building will be completed before the 1st of December, 1860.

The Long Island College Hospital.—A correspondent informs us that this institution refuses only to receive in-door patients. This announcement, which will excite surprise and mortification, he charges has been rendered necessary by the gross mismanagement of the affairs of the Hospital. It has already received the tender attentions of the Sheriff, our correspondent states, and is even in arrears for the wages of employes. He suggests that it would be well to investigate the causes which have brought about this result.

Declination of Dr. Tuthill.—Dr. Frank Tuthill, who was unanimously renominated for the Assembly by the Republicans of the Seventh District, declines the honor, on the ground that his personal affairs prevent his acceptance. He thanks the Convention for their confidence and partiality, and does not doubt that the Republicans of the Seventh District will find a representative who will stand always by the side of freedom, whom they can elect. The Convention will reassemble at Messerole Hall this evening, at 8 o'clock.

Political.—The Republicans, in the Sixth Assembly District, have nominated Charles M. Baiga for Assembly.

THE CITY GOVERNMENT.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.

More about the Appointment of Registrars—Messrs. Voorhis and Kennedy Vindicate themselves and Impugn each other's Motives—A Supervisor's Reason for Signing a Report.

At the meeting of the Board of Supervisors at 2 o'clock P. M., yesterday, all the members except Supervisor WEISMANN were in their seats, and many spectators were present. Very little business of interest was transacted, but the recriminations which Rumor had whispered would be indulged in by Supervisors VOORHIS and KENNEDY, with regard to what had been said and done, or omitted to be done, by either, in connection with the appointment of Registrars, constituted an interesting part of the proceedings.

The report of the Committee on Annual Taxes, in favor of paying to H. H. Robertson and others $852 73, for repairs to Harlem Bridge, was adopted,

The report of the Committee on Criminal Courts and Police, in favor of paying bills amounting to $1,888 54, for fitting up the office of the District Attorney, was presented.

Supervisor LITTLE, one of the Committee, said he had cut down one of the bills because he thought the charges too high; he thought the charges too high still but he had signed the report in order to get rid of it.

Supervisor KENNEDY—In order to get rid of it! I don't think the Board should allow the gentleman to get rid of it in that easy way. I move that the report be recommitted.

And the Board recommitted it. (Ayes 9, nays 3.) Supervisors CONNER, ROACHE, and LITTLE voting against the motion.

Supervisor VOORHIS arose to a question of privilege. He felt that he owed the Board an apology for being absent at the last meeting. He had been censured in the Board and out of it for being absent. On the Monday when the law directed that they should meet to appoint Registrars he had been present. Afterwards he had been informed by Supervisor BELL that an arrangement had been made by which the Registrars would be appointed to the satisfaction of both parties, and believing that the arrangement had been made in good faith he had gone away on important business, expecting to be back sooner than he was. When he learned what was going on—he saw in the TIMES that the Board had got as far as the Ninth Ward—he had immediately started for home, but had reached here after all was over and found that Supervisor KENNEDY had been censuring him very unkindly during his absence. Supervisor KENNEDY had said he was informed on the highest authority that he (Supervisor VOORHIS) was to be absent when Registrars were appointed. Any man who said he had spoken to him (Supervisor VOORHIS) about being absent when Registrars were to be appointed was a most notorious liar. No man could stand up and say that, be he who he might. The only intimation of such a thing that he had seen before was a scurrilous article in the Tribune. He had not dreamed that anything different from the arrangement which he had been told had been entered into would be done during his absence. He had stayed one day longer than he had intended with his father, who is 80 years old. He had heard it stated that he had been bribed with various sums. from $20,000 down to $5,000. He acknowledged that $5,850 was deposited to his account in the Greenwich Bank, just about the time that he left the City, and this, it was thought, clinched the nail. On the self-same day that that money was deposited he had received $5,750 that was owed him, secured by a mortgage by THOS. E. DAVIS. That would be found on record. Because he had always been on hand heretofore—because he was not away at times lobbying at Albany, and attending to the affairs of the Seventh avenue Railroad Company, he had been abused and censured on this occasion. He thought it ungentlemanly on the part of Supervisor KENNEDY to make such aspersions as he had made. He wanted to know what Supervisor KENNEDY's authority was?

Supervisor KENNEDY had nothing to do with the mortgage matters that Supervisor VOORHIS had spoken about. He had never said Supervisor VOORHIS had made a bargain, nor had the papers so reported him. He had said that he had been informed by a prominent member of the Democratic Party, three months ago, that Supervisor VOORHIS would be absent when the time for voting for Registrars came around, or else that he would vote with the Democrats. As to who had told him this—and he had mentioned it at the time to Supervisor BLUNT and one other—he would not reveal the name of that person. He had given utterance on this floor to what everybody was thinking.

Supervisor VOORHIS—You should not think aloud always.

Supervisor KENNEDY—I do think aloud always. That is my gait. There is no concealment about me. As to the remarks about his (Supervisor KENNEDY's) absence from a previous meeting, Supervisor KENNEDY said that Supervisor PURDY and Supervisor BELL had pledged themselves that no advantage should be taken of his (Supervisor KENNEDY's) absence at that time, and no advantage then was taken. Had Supervisor VOORHIS paired off with anybody? Yet he spoke of his (Supervisor KENNEDY's) example. Why had not the gentleman followed his example? He (Supervisor KENNEDY) had not told his family he was going to one place and then gone to another. He had acted honorably. As for Supervisor VOORHIS' conduct, it was before them. In conclusion, Supervisor KENNEDY, in repiy to what Supervisor VOORHIS had said about newspapers, explained that those papers (the Tribune and Post) which had stated that Supervisor BELL had used an oath in a speech before the Board, at the last meeting for the appointment of Registrars, had misrepresented the Supervisor. The expression which Supervisor BELL had used was a playful one, and he had given utterance to it while sitting in his seat, and not in addressing the Chairman; he (Supervisor KENNEDY) had called him to order in the same spirit.

Supervisor VOORHIS replied, explaining why his wife had not known where he had gone to when he was out of town. He reiterated that he had understood that an arrangement had been made with regard to the appointment of Registrars before he went away.

Supervisor PURDY, leaving the Chair, stated that he had never entered into any arrangement of this kind. He had said so before as he said so now.

And here the matter dropped.

The Board passed upon two or three small bills and adjourned to Tuesday next.

The Board of Governors.

THE NEW ISLAND HOSPITAL—REPORTS FROM THE INSTITUTIONS.

The Board of Governors of the Almshouse met in the Rotunda at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. With the exception of the passage of a resolution, asking the Comptroller for $25,000 on account of the new Island Hospital building, there was nothing of public interest done. The following is the number admitted, died, discharged and remaining for the past week:

Police Reports.

A JACK TAR TROUNCED.—Thos. Hanley landed on Monday from a long sea voyage. In search of relaxation, he wandered into No. 13 Oliver-street, a house of entertainment of which Lewis Keene is proprietor. Hanley danced and drank with the girls, and afterwards quarrelled with the men, who beat him badly on his head, and stole $10 from him. He called for the Police, and Officer McCracken caught three of the girls and Carlos Kœning, who are all charged with having been engaged in the row. The proprietor of the place escaped. The prisoners were taken before Justice OSBORN yesterday, when Kœning, in the crowded Court-room, managed to escape. Officer McCracken went to look for him, but did not find him. He returned to Court, however, with Keene, whom he found at the corner of Grand and Elm streets. This man and the girls were committed for examination.

DISTURBED IN HIS MEDITATIONS.—Andrew J. Layton, of Westbury, L. I., sat down on a hydrant in Washington-street, on Monday night, and mused, with downcast eyes. So absorbed was he in his meditations, that he failed to hear the footsteps of three highwaymen, and not until a pair of brawny hands had clutched his throat and bent him backwards to the sidewalk did he realize their presence. They left him with a compressed windpipe and without a $5 bill, besides a promissory note for $31, made by J. B. Brooks. Two young men, named Francis Dunn and John Smith, were afterwards arrested, and identified by the Long Islander as his assailants. They were committed on a charge of highway robbery. The third thief has not been found.

COUNTERFEIT BILLS.—John Boylan and Arthur Duffy were persevering in their attempts to defraud some traders in the Tenth-avenue, by giving them counterfeit notes on the Bank of Chemung at Elmira. The men were arrested, and other counterfeit $5 bills, on the Bank of New-Jersey, were found in their pockets. The prisoners were held for examination by Justice QUACKENBUSH.

HIS GOLD HAD GONE.—Mr. Louis G. Discombe, of No. 144 Tenth-street, deposited $109 in gold coin in a bureau drawer, and it was stolen. Suspecting Carl Jurgenson, one of his employes, to be the thief, he caused his arrest, and Justice QUACKENBUSH committed him to answer.

CHARGES AGAINST A POLICEMAN.—The charges made against Thaddeus C. Ferris, of the Metropolitan Police, by a girl named Mary Durkie, after full investigation, have been dismissed.

CITY INTELLIGENCE.

MEETING OF THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY—ADDRESS BY MR. J. A. POOR, OF PORTLAND.—The Historical Society met last evening, for the first time since the Summer vacation. The Hon. LUTHER BRADISH, President of the Society, occupied the Chair. The Librarian, Mr. MOORE, read a list of donations to the Society, of which the most noticeable were a photograph of a portrait of the "First Livingstone," the founder of the family of that name; and a copper globe made in Spain, and bearing the date of 1542, donated to the Society by Mr. BUCKINGHAM SMITH, late Secretary of Legation at Madrid. This globe was exhibited on the platform, and was justly regarded as a great curiosity. Mr. MOORE moved that a Special Committee should be appointed to examine and report upon it. The President named a Committee for that purpose. The President introduced to the audience JOHN A. POOR, Esq., of Portland Me., who read the paper of the evening, his subject being: "English Colonization in England." Mr. POOR was almost inaudible within a few feet from the platform, but was understood to dissent from the popular theory of the Pilgrim Fathers, and the sanctity of Plymouth Rock. He denied that New-England was first settled by the Pilgrims, and spoke of Mr. WEBSTER's celebrated Plymouth Rock speech, as a political rhapsody, as much epical as HOMER's Iliad, and worth no more as history. EVERETT also, and BANCROFT, were all wrong. The Pilgrims had no idea of forming a colony, and Plymouth Rock was the great American myth. On the conclusion of the address, Dr. FRANCIS moved the customary vote of thanks, with the usual request of a copy of the address for the archives of the Society, whereupon Mr. O'REILLY moved, as an amendment, that the address should be printed, in order that it might be "considered maturely" by members of the Society. Mr. BENEDICT could but oppose this amendment in its present shape. For ten years past, except on very special occasions, it had not been the custom of the Society to print discourses, and there was no reason why, in the present case, the rule should be departed from. He would move that the printing should be referred to the Executive Committee. This resolution was put, and carried. The meeting then adjourned,

YOUNG LANE'S HORSES, CARRIAGES, &C., UNDER THE HAMMER.—In compliance with an order of the President and Directors of the Fulton Bank, the horses, carriages, stable equipments, &c., lately owned by WILLIAM J. LANE, Jr., the defaulting Transfer Clerk, were put up at auction yesterday morning, by Mr. H. H. LEEDS. The sale took place at the private stables on Lexington-avenue, between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth streets, and attracted about five hundred persons, the majority of whom were curiosity-mongers. A small lot of household furniture which had been used by the hostler, was first offered, and knocked down at $42. Some hay and feed followed, and they were purchased for $32. Next the carriages and sleighs were brought forward: A side-bar wagon sold for $80; another, full-spring, for $112 50; a top-wagon for $217 50; a caléche for $330; a one-horse sleigh for $85; a two-horse sleigh for $162 50. The bidding, which had been dull heretofore, improved a trifle when the horses were trotted out, although the animals did not sell for half the amount which is said to have been paid for them. Cobb, a roan, costing $600, was purchased by Mr. MAGOON for $282 50. Boston, a dark bay, was led off by ANDREW STEVENS for $550, just an advance of $50 on the starting bid. Selim, a sorrel, for which LANE paid $1,100, was transferred to Mr. ELDON for $500. Bess, the chestnut mare, the best-conditioned of the four, bought for $1,000, sold to ROBERT METCALF for $535. The blankets, fly-nets, sleigh-bells, robes, harness and fancy equipments, of which there were 35 lots, all of superior manufacture and highly decorated, mostly sold at low rates. The exceptions were: 3 sets of single harness, $113; a saddle and bridle, $15 50; 3 fancy blankets, $43; 2 Arctic foxrobes, $82; another, wolf-skin, $36; another, African lynx, $27; a fur coat, $56. To-day Mr. LEEDS will sell, at his salesroom, No. 23 Nassau-street, the furniture of LANE's house in Nineteenth-street. It is described as being of the most magnificent description.

LECTURE BY MR. MEAGHER ON DEAN SWIFT.—Cooper Institute was crowded in every part last evening to listen to THOMAS FRANCIS MEAGHER'S defence of that illustrious Irishman, Dean SWIFT, from the aspersions of his various assailants, but more particularly from those of the novelist and satirist, THACKERAY. Mr. DUMPLY, the President of the Tom Moore Club, introduced Mr. MEAGHER. The lecturer narrated the leading events of SWIFT's life, from the time of his entrance on the great field of life, when he traveled to Leicester, with his wallet containing a lump of soap and a greasy Horace, slung in a knapsack over his shoulder on the end of a stick, till the time when he swayed governments, found favor with premiers, and headed a most vehement popular opposition in Ireland against the assumptions of the English Crown. Mr. MEAGHER, in concluding his address, summed up rapidly DEAN SWIFT's leading characteristics; claiming for him a generous hatred of all untruth, crooked counsels selfishness and intrigue. He was sincere, incorruptible, fearless, solitary and imperious, nevertheless just, humane, charitable and gracious, as POPE asserts him to have been to the end, unpurchased and uncompromised. Mr. M. was frequently and heartily applauded.

THE STEAM-TUG SCALDING CASE.—It appears, from the testimony of the engineer and fireman of the steam-tug Active, at the inquest which was held yesterday by Coroner O'KEEFE, upon the remains of FRANCIS HARRIS, one of the three lads who were severely scalded on board that boat on Saturday night, that the occurrence was occasioned by the boy's own act. Deceased and two other lads were lying on the top of the boiler at the time the furnace fires were out, but the water in the boiler retained considerable heat. The bolt of the plate which covered the man-hole had been temporarily removed, for the purpose of cleaning the boiler, and the heavy piece of iron was held in its position by a rope. The boys slackened the fastening, and the cap fell within the boiler, splashing the hot water out of the hole over them in such a quantity as to cause the death of HARRIS. The jury rendered a verdict accordingly. Deceased was 13 years of age. His companions are likely to recover.

SUICIDE, PROBABLE INFANTICIDE, AND ACCIDENTAL DEATH.—A German, 35 years of age, named FREDERICK GERSTENBERG, who is said to have been an habitual drunkard, ended his existence on Monday morning, by hanging himself. He was found in the stable No. 196 West 44th-st., where he occasionally worked, suspended from a ladder by a leather strap. A brandy bottle lay at his feet. Coroner JACKMAN's jury returned a verdict in accordance with these facts. ....The body of a male infant, much decomposed, was found at the foot of Amos-street, North-River, with a brick tied to its neck by a cord. Coroner SCHIRMER held an inquest at the Ninth Ward Stationhouse, but it was impossible to tell whether the child had been thrown into the water before or after its death. No evidence as to who were its parents was elicited.... JANE FREAS, four years of age, fell from the third-story window of her parents' house, No. 136 Goerck-street, on Monday evening. She died in a few minutes thereafter. An inquest was held by Coroner JACKMAN.

MOZART HALL JUDICIAL NOMINATIONS.—The Wood faction of the City Democracy met at Mozart Hall, Broadway, last evening, for the purpose of nominating candidates for the Judiciary and Supervisors. The attendance was large, and much interest was manifested in the result. Among the large lobby were many conspicuous Tammany men. Mr. GEORGE GENET, of the Fifteenth Ward, presided. The Convention immediately after organizing proceeded to ballot for a candidate for a Justice of the Supreme Court. The result was the unanimous nomination of WILLIAM H. LEONARD, who received 80 votes, while Judge J. J. ROOSEVELT, his competitor, received only 27 votes. JAMES MONCREIF (the present incumbent) was nominated by acclamation for reélection as a Justice of the Superior Court, as was CHARLES P. DALY as Judge of the Court of Common Pleas. The Convention then adjourned to Thursday evening next when a candidate for Supervisor will be selected.

STEAMBOAT SUNK.—Yesterday afternoon, about 5 o'clock, the small steamboat Edwin left the pier at the foot of Amos-street, with several passengers and a large cargo of merchandise, bound for Nyack and Haverstraw. It was remarked that the boat careened considerably, and when opposite Twenty-ninth-street she commenced to sink. The pilot attempted to make a landing, but was unable to do so, and the boat went down. The steam-tugs Hunt and Dr. Kane were in the immediate vicinity. They proceeded to the assistance of the sunken steamer. A large number of row-boats took off the passengers, and saved some of the light freight. The general opinion was that the boat was overloaded. The loss will probably amount to nearly $2,000. No part of the boat is visible but her wheel-house and smoke-stack.

I. O. O. F.—The Grand Lodge of the United States, at its recent annual session in Baltimore, consisted of 108 officers and members. It is probably the best legislative body in the world, as all of its members must necessarily have presided over subordinate lodges, and a large proportion having been the presiding officers of State Grand Lodges. The material of the late Grand Lodge was as follows: Mechanics and manufacturers, 30; lawyers, 17; merchants, 15 officers of private corporations, 14; public officials, 9; physicians, druggists and dentists, 7; private bankers and clerks, 7; farmers and planters, 4; editors, 3; clergyman, 1; no occupation, 1. Among the above were Judges, Postmasters, Railroad and Bank Presidents, Generals, and so on, and what is odd, not a single public or private defaulter.

LIQUOR DEALERS' MEETING.—The monthly meeting of the Liquor Dealers' Association was held last evening at HILDERBRAND'S, in Hester-street. There were some fifty new members initiated, and the evening was mostly occupied with the reports of the Treasurer, the Executive Committee and Board of Trustees. The Association consists of between 6,000 and 7,000 members. The Society are disposed to acquiesce in all reasonable demands of the authorities respecting the non-sale of liquor on Sunday, and a rule of the body requires each member, when addressed by one of the Police, to treat him with entire respect, and report the case to the legal counsel of the Association.

THE MYSTERIES OF TAMMANY.—A regular meeting of the Tammany Society took place at the Old Wigwam last night, WILSON SMALL presiding, in the absence of Grand Sachem FOWLER. The only business of moment was the initiation of candidates for membership, about twenty of whom were inducted into the first mysteries. The list includes quite a number of prominent Democrats—among them John Clancy, John Kerr, Elijah Ward, Thomas C. Fields, Benjamin M. Whitlock, Aaron B. Rollins, William H. Leonard, John O'Keefe, John E. Devlin, and others.

Staten Island.

THE FLOATING HOSPITAL.—The approach of the stormy season rendering it expedient, if not perilous, to keep the Falcon at her moorings in the lower bay, has caused her removal to a more secure anchorage near the old Quarantine. The apparition is said to be anything but welcome to the Staten Islanders, and the discontent is likely to be the more wide-spread on account of the revival of the practice of inferring the dead from infectious diseases within the old Marine Hospital grounds. A patient, who had died of cholera, was thus buried a day or two since. The season of small-pox and ship-fever being at hand, the "friends of removal" are ardently opposed to reviving this offensive, and, as they argue, most dangerous form of the Quarantine nuisance. The removal, however, is understood to have the sanction of the Commissioners.

The Supervisors of Richmond County have offered a reward of $500 for the detection of the person or persons who on the night of the 21st of August waylaid FRANCIS DUCHARME, near Clifton, Staten Island, upon which occasion he was so terribly beaten with a slung-shot, or other murderous weapon, that he died within a few hours thereafter, which occurrence was, at the time, reported in the TIMES.

A BAPTIST SUNDAY-SCHOOL UNION.

Principals of the Organization—The Constitution and Terms of Membership—Names of Officers.

An important Convention of ministers and laity of the Baptist denomination, having for its object the formation of a Sunday-School Union for the country at large, was held in this City yesterday. The success of similar organizations in the Methodist Episcopal and other Churches, has had its influence in originating the movement. The Convention assembled at the First Baptist Church in Broome-street, and was called to order at 2 o'clock P. M. About one hundred delegates were present, representing, in many instances, distant places, and quite fully in and near the City. CHARLES T. GOODWIN was elected President of the Convention, and J. BANNISTER, Secretary. The exercises were opened by singing the 358th hymn, and prayer by the Rev. F. REMINGTON.

Mr. C. A. BUCKBEE read the minutes of the various preliminary meetings, after which the Committee on the Constitution made report. This was taken up and discussed, being adopted seriatim. The 4th article, defining who shall constitute members of the Union, and the terms of membership, occasioned the principal discussion. Mr. BRECKINRIDGE favored the plan of graduating the number of delegates from each school by the amount of money subscribed, in order to secure the largest amount to the treasury. Mr. EDDY, Dr. ARMITAGE and Dr. WYCKOFF were for making the number in each school the basis of representation—every school subscribing having a claim to at least one delegate. The matter was referred to a Committee, consisting of Dr. ARMITAGE and Messrs. BRECKINRIDGE and WYCKOFF. The remainder of the organization, meantime, was proceeded with.

The Constitution may be thus epitomized:

The organization is to be called the Baptist Sunday School Union. The object is to secure thorough instruction in all the doctrines of the Sacred Scriptures, and to promote, in every suitable way, the prosperity and growth of the schools of the denomination. The Union is to be composed of delegates from Sabbath Schools, annual members, life members, and life directors. The terms of membership, as defined in the 4th article, are as follows: "Any school contributing to the funds of this Union shall be entitled to be represented by an annual delegate, and for every $10 annually contributed, to an additional delegate. An annual member may be made by the payment of $1 into the Treasury; a life member by the payment of $10; and a life director by the payment of $30.

A series of seven resolutions, declaring that the Union is to make itself acquainted with the system of "instruction in Sunday Schools, and with the books needed, and to recommend the same to the schools in the Union; that they inform themselves where the various books and publications can be procured on the lowest terms, and that they be authorized to prepare and publish such new books as may be needed, giving the preference to the American Baptist Publication Society, provided that Society will sell as cheaply as any other. They are not to involve the Union in any expenses for the same. An efficient system of visitation of the schools shall be instituted, and the Union is to be essentially missionary in its character.

The following officers were elected: CHARLES T. GOODWIN, President; C. W. THOMAS, N. D. MURPHY and J. D. WILLIAMSON, Vice-Presidents; S. P. HILLMAN, Secretary; J. H. TOWNSEND, Treasurer. Fifteen Directors were also chosen.

Mr. GOODWIN returned his acknowledgments for the honor conferred upon him in electing him to the post of president of a Baptist Sunday School Union. He was devotedly attached to the Sabbath School cause, and the Baptist S. S. Union; these feelings he had cherished ever since he had been a professor of religion. He had been a Sabbath School teacher for seventeen years, and had often experienced great difficulty in procuring suitable books. If this organization were taken in hand in the proper spirit, he predicted that in a few years that they would be proud of it. He pledged his best efforts to the discharge of the duties of his office.

At the conclusion of the meeting, fourteen persons subscribed as life directors, and three as life members of the new Union. The exercises were closed by prayer and a Benediction.

Messrs. CLARK & FANNING, PRINCIPALS,
Opens its seventeenth scholastic year on Sept. 12, 1859.

Male pupils of all ages are received and instructed in all branches preparatory to business or college. The number of pupils in all the departments is 200. The Principals are assisted in Classics, Mathematics, Natural Sciences, French, German, Spanish, Book-keeping, Drawing, Penmanship, Elocution, Composition, &c., by TEN experienced Professors and Instructors.

EXAMINATION OF THE TARRYTOWN INSTITUTE.

The Twenty-third Term of this Institution closed on Thursday, Sept. 29.

The Committee in attendance take great pleasure in saying that the examination of the several classes brought before them was highly creditable to the pupils themselves, and evinced that thorough and careful training for which their instructors are noted.

The scholars were examined in French, English, Grammar, Mental and Practical Arithmetic, Algebra, Geography, Single and Double-entry Book-keeping, &c., in all of which they acquitted themselves honorably, and in some of which they were very superior, particularly in French and Book-keeping. The declamations were highly satisfactory, and the compositions evinced thought and originality.

One peculiarly pleasing feature of the examination was the evidence it gave of the careful instruction of the pupils in first principles, as they were required to give a reason for everything—a matter of the greatest importance, and without which any system of education is sadly defective.

In order to develop the whole man, due attention is paid to the physical, the mental, and moral education of the students.

The facilities afforded at this Institution in the formation of good business habits, and to those who design to engage in mercantile pursuits, are perhaps unsurpassed by any in the land, as particular attention is paid to these departments of education.

At the close of the Examination, rewards of merit were presented to those who had particularly distinguished themselves—among which were a beautiful and costly gold medal, to James B. Hawes, of Tarrytown, and two silver medals,—one to Victor R. Torices, of Spain, and one to Francisco E. de Silva, of Cuba.

Allen Newman, A. M., the Principal, has been for more than a quarter of a century, engaged in the work of education, and whose success in his profession affords the strongest evidence of his skill and competency. C. W. Dawson, M. A., the Associate Principal, by a faithful devotion to the business of teaching for a number of years past, has shown himself eminently qualified for the position which he now so honorably and usefully fills.

Nor would we omit the testimonial due to Mr. W. Powell, who seems peculiarly adapted to the work of instructing the young, and as a teacher of the French language he has but few, if any, superiors. Being of English parentage, and educated in France, he has thus been familiar with both languages from his youth.

To those who wish to give their sons a thorough and practical education, we most cordially and heartily recommend the Tarrytown Institute.

PUBLIC SALE OF THE
COVINGTON AND LEXINGTON RAILROAD.

JAMES WINSLOW, Trustee, &c., Plaintiff in Equity vs. The Covington and Lexington Railroad Company et al., Defendants.

Under and by virtue of the judgment of the Fayette Circuit Court in this cause, at its present term, and as Commissioner of said Court, I shall proceed on WEDNESDAY, the 5th day of October next, at the Court-House door in the City of Lexington, to sell to the highest and best bidder all the

PROPERTY,
RIGHTS AND FRANCHISES
OF THE
COVINGTON AND LEXINGTON
RAILROAD COMPANY,

Embraced in the mortgage of the plaintiff, including the RAILROAD of said Company and all its REAL ESTATE, DEPOTS and STATION-HOUSES, the LOCOMOTIVES, CARS and MACHINERY, and the FUEL and MATERIALS of every description on hand and in the possession of said Company; and also, all the rights of said Company as lessees of the road between Paris and Lexington from the Maysville and Lexington Railroad Company, and all their rights as lessees from the Lexington and Danville Railroad Association, of the road from Lexington to Nicholasville.

The sale will be upon the following terms, to wit:

First—The purchaser will be required to pay the principal and interest of the four hundred bonds of $1,000 each, issued under and secured by the first mortgage of said Company at the times and place when the same shall become due. These bonds with the mortgage under which they were issued will continue until fully paid off, to constitute a first lien on the property.

Second—The purchaser will be required (if his bid embraces the same) to pay the principal and interest of the one thousand bonds of $1,000 each, issued under the second mortgage of said Company, as follows, to wit: The principal on the 1st of March, 1863, and the interest at the rate of seven per cent. semi-annually, on the 1st of March and September in each year, at the Bank of America, New-York City. Also, the sum of $35,000, with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the 1st of September, 1858; and $35,000, with like interest, from the 1st of March, 1859; and $35,000, with like interest from the 1st of September, 1859, until the day of sale, together with the plaintiff's costs in this suit. For the last mentioned sums, with interest at the like rate from the day of sale, the purchaser will be required to execute bonds with good securities, payable in equal installments, at six, twelve and eighteen months from the day of sale, and having the effect of judgments.

To secure the payment of the principal and interest of the second mortgage bonds, a lien will be reserved upon the property, and in addition the purchaser will be required to deliver to the Commissioner securities of the cash value of $100,000, which may consist of bonds of the State of Kentucky or Ohio, at par, or bonds of the United States, or any other State in the Union which sell in the City of New-York at or over par; or first or second mortgage bonds of the Covington and Lexington Railroad Company, or mortgages upon unincumbered real estate in Kentucky or Hamilton County, Ohio, (the purchaser defraying the expense of investigating the title to and ascertaining the value of such property.) The Commissioner is authorized to receive other securities than those named, (if of undoubted permanent value,) subject to the approval of the Court. The income accruing upon the securities thus deposited will be for the benefit of the purchaser until default made by him.

The purchaser will be further required to invest annually sixty thousand dollars of the revenues of the property in safe and productive securities as the Court may direct. Of this sum thirty thousand dollars shall constitute a sinking fund to pay the principal of the 1st and 2d Mortgage Bonds, and thirty thousand dollars shall go to create a contingent and renewal fund; but any sums expended by the purchaser in the improvement and renewal of the road (over and above the ordinary current repair) will be deducted from the appropriation to the contingent and renewal fund for that year.

Third—If his bid embraces the same, the purchaser shall execute his bonds with good security, having the effect of judgments, and payable in equal installments at six, twelve and eighteen months from the day of sale, with interest upon each at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the day of sale, for the payment of the interest in arrear on the third mortgage bonds, (except those held by Bowler, Robbins, and S. J. & J. W. Walker at the institution of this suit,) with like interest on each installment of the same, from the time they severally became due until the day of sale. He will also be required to pay the principal of said bonds and the interest accruing on the same after the sale, at the times and place where they shall become due. As a security for the payment of the said principal and interest, the purchaser must deliver to the undersigned securities to the cash value of $100,000, and of the same character as those required for the security of the second mortgage bonds, and in addition to those named, third mortgage bonds of this class may be received.

Fourth—If his bid embraces the same the purchaser will be required to execute bonds with good security, and having the force of judgments, for the payment in three equal installments, at six, twelve and eighteen months, with interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the day of sale, of the following sums, to wit: $180,500, with like interest, from the 1st of July, 1859, till the day of sale; the sum of $9,025, with like interest, from the 1st of May, 1858, till the same day; the sum of $9,025, with like interest, from the 1st day of May, 1859, till the same day; and the sum of $3,509, with like interest, from the 10th of July, 1859, until the same day.

Fifth—If his bid embraces the same, the purchaser will be required to execute bonds, with good security, payable in six, twelve and eighteen months from the day of sale, bearing interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum from the time of the several installments severally fell due until the day of sale. And he shall also be bound to pay the principal and interest of said third mortgage bonds at the times and place where they are payable, and as security therefor he shall deposit with the Commissioner securities of the cash value of $100,000, of the character and upon the conditions prescribed for the other third mortgage bonds. The two classes of third mortgage bonds referred to in this and the third specification embrace in the aggregate 600 bonds of $1,000 each.

Sixth—For the remaining purchase money (if any) the purchaser will be required to execute his bonds, with good security, having the force of judgments, and payable in equal installments, at six, twelve and eighteen months, from the day of sale, with interest at the rate of six per cent. from said day.

The Commissioner will deliver to the purchaser a certificate of purchase, and will require from him the immediate deposit of securities of the cash value of $20,000 as security, that the terms of the sale will be complied with by him within twenty days. If the deposit is not made, the bidder will be reported to the Court for a contempt, and the sale will proceed as though his bid had not been made. If, after making the deposit, the successful bidder shall fail to comply with the terms of the sale within the prescribed period, the property will be again sold, and the deposit will be retained to meet the loss and damage arising from this non-compliance. So soon as the purchaser has received his certificate of purchase, the possession of the property will be delivered to him, to be retained by him until the sale is confirmed or quashed by the Court. If confirmed, the possession will be continued in him; but if quashed, he will be required to surrender the possession to a Receiver of the Court, and to account for and pay over the earnings of the property while in his possession. After which the securities deposited by him will be returned.

The Court reserves the power by summary proceedings against the purchaser, to enforce compliance with the terms of sale, and until full payment is made, to coerce the purchaser to keep the property in good repair, and in case of default on his part to appoint a receiver to take the property in possession, or to order a resale. And to secure a full and complete compliance with the terms, a lien will be retained upon all the property, rights and franchises, and the income arising therefrom, to which lien no security of the purchaser will be subrogated until after all the terms are fully complied with.

For two days next preceding the sale, there will be exhibited at the Clerk's office of the Fayette Circuit Court, in Lexington, an inventory of the property to be sold. And the undersigned will himself attend to exhibit the same, and give information concerning the property and the Company's title thereto, and interest therein.

AUGUST 17. W. A. DUDLEY, Commissioner.

INSURANCE.

THE
LIFE
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF NEW-YORK.
Office in
Continental Bank Building,
No. 7 Nassau-st.,
Is prepared to issue Policies as follows, viz.:
POLICIES IN FAVOR OF AND PAYABLE TO THE WIFE,
Free from the claims of creditors.
POLICIES PAYABLE ON ATTAINING A SPECIFIED AGE,
Or payable in case of death before attaining such age.
POLICIES GRANTED TO CREDITORS,
On the lives of their debtors.
POLICIES GRANTED FOR ANY NUMBER OF YEARS,
PREMIUMS PAYABLE IN CASH,
Quarterly, semi-annually, or annually.
DIVIDENDS DECLARED EVERY THREE YEARS. And the surplus belonging to the policy holders returned to them in Scrip.

This Scrip bears six per cent. per annum interest, payable in cash, and is redeemed when the aggregate issue shall have amounted to $1,000,000.

At the same time, the Company is empowered by its Charter to purchase the Scrip for the benefit of the policy holders before that time.

This Scrip is not affected by the forfeiture or sale of the policy, which is a great advantage over the system adopted by some Companies, of subjecting the dividend to the same terms of forfeiture and sale as the policy by indorsing it thereon. This is clearly unjust, as the dividend is a surplus fund, and is rightly the property of the insured, irrespective of the policy.

The interest on the Scrip gradually reduces the premium.

ITS PREMIUMS
ARE BASED UPON EXPERIENCE TO THE PRESENT TIME.

No one class of insurers is required to pay the deficiency of others.

MUSICAL.

THE DRIGGS PATENT PIANO-FORTE
Are all of the full scale of 7-octave. The most experienced workmen, the greatest perfection of mechanical skill, and the best seasoned materials are employed in their manufacture.

They are constructed on a solid iron frame or bedplate, entirely separate from the case, thus relieving the case, sound-boards and all the wood-work from the strain of the strings, making them much more solid and enduring. There are two sounding boards, arranged as those of a violin, giving three times the amount of vibrating surface found in any other piano; which, being free from the strain of the strings, becomes more sonorous and pure on their vibrations as the piano becomes older. Their construction is the most simple and scientific, and they are the most enduring and full-toned pianos ever made. Call and see them, at WM. HALL & SON'S,

NEW-YORK POLITICS.

The Ratification Meeting at Albany—Deliberations of the Democracy of the Capital—Speeches of the Hon. John A. Dix, the Hon. Daniel S. Dickinson and Others.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

ALBANY, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

Under the call of the General Committee of the City and County of Albany, the Democrats held a grand ratification meeting at the Capitol to-night, to indorse the State nominations and rejoice over the reunion of the party.

Large numbers of persons assembled in the Park of the Capitol, where a speaking platform was erected.

The Park was densely crowded with spectators, and the excitement, doubtless, lost nothing from the crowds attending the State Fair, nor from the bands of music, rockets and Drummond lights, which the managers of the great demonstration had liberally supplied, although it is, of course, held that the attendance would have been numerous without these extraneous aids. As it was, the meeting certainly was one of the largest that has been held at the State capital for some years.

At the entrance of the Park two fine Drummond lights sent a glare down State-street and up the Park over the close-packed Democratic family of Hards and Softs.

The speakers were arranged so as to give all sides a fair representation on the platform. DICKINSON for the very Hards; DIX for the very Softs; TREMAINE for the softened Hards, and SEYMOUR for the hardened Softs. The latter, however, was unable to attend in consequence of illness, so one shade of shell was unavoidably unrepresented.

At 7½ o'clock, P. M., the different Wards of the City, by their delegations, with bands of music and transparencies, arrived on the ground, and they advanced to the stand amid the firing of rockets and the playing of music.

Delegations from Troy, Waterford and other towns also arrived with music and transparencies. Among these were mottoes indicative of great satisfaction at the union of the Democracy of the State, and lauding the State officers. Union Saving and Canal Economy formed the staple of the inscriptions.

JOHN MCKNIGHT called the meeting to order, and nominated JOHN K. PORTER as Chairman. [Applause.]

Mr. PORTER came forward and thanked the meeting for the honor conferred on him this evening. It was to do honor to the party, to the candidates they had nominated, to the platform they had laid down, to the cause they had at heart, and to the distinguished statesman who would address them to-night. [Loud applause.]

Vice-Presidents and Secretaries from the various wards and towns were then duly nominated, and a Committee on resolutions appointed, on motion of JNO. V. L. PRUYN.

The Committee were requested to retire to the Adjutant-General's room, which occasioned the remark from an outsider that it was a good place to drill them in.

Mr. PORTER then introduced the Hon. JNO. A. DIX to the meeting, who was greeted with loud applause.

Mr. DIX was glad to meet his old friends face to face once more after so many years' absence. While the time had been passing away many of those who had been foremost in the ranks had fought their last battle for the ascendancy of the Democratic Party, and were resting from their labors. The De Witts, the Wendells, the Mahers, the elder Cassidys and the Hills, whom they had been accustomed to meet were there no longer. But in the political, as in the intellectual and physical world, great principles and truths are undying, and when death strikes down in the ranks a strong man or stout heart, the vacancy is instantly filled up, and the solid column moves on unbroken and undiminished in activity and force. If the old file leaders are missed, others are found, as faithful and resolute in the Democratic cause. He regretted that business would call him from them in a very few moments, but he could not refuse the invitation to be present. He wished to assure the Democracy of Albany how sincerely he was with them in the present State canvass, and how cordially he concurred in the proceedings at Syracuse in all their parts, in the selection of capable and faithful candidates, and in the arrangement which had been made to secure a representation of the Democracy of New-York, unbroken and harmonious, in the Charleston Convention. A State election is always of the highest importance; especially so, when we have great financial interests to protect, and radical errors to amend in the policy and measures of our opponents. He would not enter upon an extended examination of the issues at this time. Living at the seat of legislation, they well knew by whom and under whose auspices the foundations of the erroneous State debt which hangs over us were laid. They knew by whom the Democratic policy of enlarging the Erie Canal without enlarging the State debt was overthrown. They needed no statement of the facts to show that the evils of the day are not the work of the Democracy, for they had been developed under their very eyes. But on the future canvass, to which this was preliminary, he could not forbear saying a few words. In our day no contest has brought with it issues having a more direct bearing on the permanent interest and peace of the country. They had the lingering remains of a sectional question to cast aside, the smouldering brands of a burnt-out controversy, which should be patriotically covered up in their own ashes instead of blown into new flame. This is the first great duty. The Democracy of the Union have to choose their standard-bearers from among those who are in favor of acquiescing cheerfully with what has been settled by competent authority, and of leaving what is unsettled to be disposed of in a constitutional manner, when, as practical questions, they come up for adjournment. There are two great classes of political thinkers in the United States—those who look into the future republic as it moves in majesty in its march to distinction and power, through a long vista of prosperity and union and friendly brotherhood, and those who see it through the gloomy and distorted medium of dissension and irrepressible conflict." From these two classes the representative men who are to lead the opposing forces in the great contest of 1860 are to be drawn. Of the issue of the contest on such a basis he had not a particle of doubt. The country longs for domestic repose, and the people will rally round the standard which holds out to them a hope of its attainment. Another great duty also pressed upon them—that of cutting off useless expenditure and relieving the people from the burdens of taxation. He argued that enough of trouble had been left to embarrass the present national Administration. That Administration had dispersed the dark clouds—they had now tranquillity at home and abroad, and our name was respected all over the globe. These were great results to be accomplished in less than three years, and any Administration might well be content with them. But he did not come here to laud political friends, or rail at political enemies. We are now at peace at home and abroad, and it was to be hoped that Congress would coöperate with the Executive in needful, wholesome reforms. It was to the legislative body that we looked principally for retrenchment, care, and reform, and he believed Congress would be faithful to the task. Mr. DIX enlarged on the power which each man possesses in shaping and modeling the conduct of the Government, and every man should echo and reëcho the cry, that public plunder must be put down, and this should be repeated and repeated till the end was accomplished. He rejoiced that the Democracy of New-York now stood in a position where their voice would be heard, and respected by the whole Union. Differences and divisions were now of the past and henceforth all would unite in making New-York as great and as influential as she should be. He excused himself from more extended remarks, and concluded by declaring that the present contest in New-York was watched by the whole Union with interest, and that the result would have a great bearing on the struggle of 1860. Let them remember that those who went into battle boldly and confidently were almost certain of success.

At the close of Mr. DIX's remarks there was loud and continued applause.

Mr. JOHN V. L. PRUYN came forward to report the resolutions, but his voice was drowned by the strains of "Hail Columbia" from a brass band. When the music ceased, Mr. (PRUYN) reported the following resolutions:

Resolved, That assembled as we are to express our opinions of the action of the recent Convention of the Democracy of New-York, held at Syracuse, we hail and applaud the reunion and perfect consolidation of the Democratic Party of New-York, there so happily consummated, and we regard it as a cause of proud congratulation, that the Democracy of New-York is now a unit, and its past divisions are no longer remembered, except as a warning against further alienation.

Resolved, That the renomination of S. E. Church for Comptroller, L. Tremain for Attorney-General, Isaac V. Vanderpoel for Treasurer, Van Rt. Richmond for State Engineer and Surveyor, offices which they have filled with distinguished ability and fidelity, and in the nomination of D. R. T. Jones for Secretary of the State, William J. Skinner for Canal Commissioner, Noble B. Elderkin for State Prison Inspector, and John L. Lewis for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, we recognize the selection of the ticket as of unusual excellence, sound in the personal character of the candidates, their ability and fidelity in the discharge of public trusts, and their devotion to Democratic principles, and that we pledge them on behalf of the Democrats of Albany a vigorous and enthusiastic support.

Resolved, That the Syracuse Convention, in presenting the Hon. ALEX. S. JOHNSON for reëlection to the office of Judge of the Court of Appeals, has responded to that conservative and just public sentiment, which, irrespective of partisan associations, demands the retention in this high judicial position of a jurist so distinguished for his industry, legal learning, purity and all the qualities which adorn and elevate the judicial character.

Resolved, That in the sound positions in respect to the canals and finances of this State, assumed in the resolutions of the Democratic State Convention, ratified as we believe they will be by the verdict of the people, we see the promise of the rescue of our public works and finances from the disorder and ruin, into which the profligate schemes of the Seward Ruggles party have plunged them, and of the arrest of that policy of extravagant and corrupt expenditures and reckless and unrestricted debt, which has brought upon the people a grinding taxation, from which the only relief is in the restoration of the Government to the prudent, economical pay, as you go Democratic policy.

Resolved, That appreciating the importance of the approaching election in its bearing on the vital interests of the tax-payers of this State, upon the integrity of the union of these States, the Democratic electors of the city and county of Albany are constrained, by every [illegible] to put forth their best exertions to secure the success of the Democratic ticket, the whole [illegible] thereof;

[illegible] proud of our country and its institutions, and looking forward to the preservation of the glorious and blessed compact which holds the brotherhood of states in bonds of Union, we regard as traitors unworthy to be American citizens, the political leaders and their partizans, who seek to array one portion of the country against the other, and threaten to lit[illegible] the domain of sovereign States, for the purpose of [illegible] their domestic ambition. From this [illegible] view we regard the recent proclamation of WM. H. SEWARD of an irrepressible conflict between the North and South, which must end in the conquest or subjection of the one or the other, as the demonstration of a spirit which should be instantly and overwhelmingly rebuked, and that in the indication of the loyalty and of the good name of the State, the great and cosmopolitan State of New-York should take the lead; that it is the approaching conflict, and at the ballot-box that this great lesson must be administered.

Resolved, That we welcome the intelligence of a Democratic victory in California as the omen of success in our own State, and that viewing all the elements of disaffection, the fanaticism and corrupt combinations that had to be encountered, this triumph is another evidence of the indomitable energies, the faith in principal, and the reliance upon the popular intelligence, which make the Democratic party invincible.

The resolutions were received with great applause, and adopted unanimously.

Loud calls were now made for "DICKINSON," "DICKINSON."

Mr. PORTER rose and said: "We are on the eve of a great national battle and had summoned at the head of our column our glorious Old Chief, who was ready now as ever to lead the hosts of the united Democracy of New-York to victory.

Mr. DICKINSON came forward and was greeted with nine tremendous cheers.

Mr. DICKINSON said that the Democratic Party a large and respectable portion of which he saw assembled before him is a party of the people. It was not a party of privileges, it was not a party created for the purpose of building up leadersbips, endowing combinations or conferring offices on individuals, but for the purpose of giving and perpetuating civil and religious liberty to man. It reposes not merely in in cities and villages, although it embraces all classes and condition of men, but its great number and greater power, rests with the mass, wherever anvils ring and hammers beat, wherever the woodman's axe is heard, wherever the plow is seen in the furrow, wherever man toils, and has a strong arm and a stronger heart. Its principles throb and pulsate with the laboring, toiling masses; its uses are the preservation of liberty and equality. In order to be efficient, it must have an organization. It resides beyond the mountains, and disseminates through the entire country. It must have a polar star of principle, and a common watchword, and that watchword is "Equal rights to all men." It was ordained by the Almighty that man should earn his bread by the sweat of his brow; and in every department of life man finds awaiting him an irrepressible conflict—not an irrepressible conflict between sovereign States that shall urge them to imbrue their hands in each other's blood. Between States bound by common ties, and baptized in common blood? Not such an irrepressible conflict! But an irrepressible conflict between good and evil, between truth and error, between equality and privilege, between the wars of men and those that lay taxes on labor until the working man should be compelled to purge his own chains, and gild the chariot wheels that are driven over his neck, [loud cheers.] Such an irrepressible conflict the Democratic Party has before it, for as it is man's destiny to earn his daily bread by the sweat of his brow, so it is his his destiny to carve out a conflict in the moral world, and he must struggle in the political as in the physical world against worldly opposition, the flesh and the devil. The mission of the Democratic Party, he had already said, was not for the few, but for the many. Its mission was to see that every one was permitted to pursue his own course undisturbed, so long as he acts in consistence with the law and the Constitution of his country, and that outside the fair and just taxation levied on him for the common good, he be permitted to enjoy the fruits of his own earnings. Other creatures may roam idle and unemployed, but man has his daily task allotted to him; he has to fight against the enemies of the Constitution; to uphold the Constitution his fathers established with their blood, to oppose every demagogue who finds assailing his country, and to fight until those who have a common mission to carve out liberty and perpetuate it, until they shall unite together and send out the blessings of civil and religious liberty to all mankind,—till the great blessings which have been vouchsafed to us shall shoot across the Atlantic and illuminate the darkness of worlds made by the Creator as good as our own,—until the people of the whole earth shall gather round a common fountain, and drink at one well of gushing liberty. The Democracy must have labor to perform so long as it finds States arrayed one against the other by the sectional agitators and cat-faced hypocrites, who only spread dissensions amongst the brethren of a common Union for their own vile and selfish purposes, like one who kindles a conflagration, only that he may run away with the spoils that chance to come within his reach. He asked how long had this great conflict, of which we hear so much, been going on between Slavery and Pro-Slavery? The institution existed at the time of the Revolution, and ever since then the Slave States have been growing weaker and the Free States more powerful, and yet we are told that now it is our duty to turn round on our Southern brethren and crush them. The State of New-York had been within his recollection a Slave State; it had been left to itself to banish the institution in its own way, and at its own time. The Democratic Party only say, leave this question to the other States, as it was left to us, to be disposed of by themselves. To be as honorable as virtuous, as intelligent, and as religious as we ourselves are, we entered with them into a holy compact. They are now in a minority, which every day increases our majority. We are called on them by every consideration of justice and of honor to stand by the compromises of the Constitution in letter and in spirit, and to allow our sister State to settle their own domestic affairs in their own way, and to leave this great disturbing question to be settled as the Great Being who presides over all shall in his wisdom direct. With this principle prevailing, there need be no fear of the future; and yet so much had this question of Slavery been argued and agitated that honest people really became alarmed—they actually feared that the institution of Slavery was about to roll its dark shadow over the North and cover the New-England States, that the South would force slavery on us whether we would or would not. There was an old lady in Vermont who had lain lame and ill for a number of years, and had never seen a locomotive; at last she went out one day and beheld one come along, hissing, steaming, and showing its fiery front; she was overcome with terror and nearly fainted away, and when asked what she thought it was, she answered she did not know, but she thought it might be that abominable slave-power coming along. But neither old ladies in petticoats or pantaloons shall be alarmed. The slave States are every day growing weaker, and the free States strong, and there is no more danger of the slave States increasing than there is of tropical fruits growing in Davis' Straits. [Cheers.] But if there is no irrepressible conflicts between the Slave and Free States, there is a conflict at our own doors, here, at the State Legislature, to which we should bandage our eyes. He addressed men now as Democrats, caring not what they were designated yesterday. The world moves, and goes ahead, and there are no Rip VanWinkles in the Democratic Party. It is a party which takes up with the questions of to-day, and lets the dead bury the dead. As Democrats then, united, as all new men, he asked them not to flinch from this irrepressible conflict. They were now called on to wage war with bad government. There was, in the old times, an old Federal Party, rich, proud, aristocratic, and distrustful of popular intelligence. There is to-day a party called the Republican party, which was but the natural descendant of the Federal party. We did not blame it for taking the name of Republican for it had worn out every other respectable name, and by this it will not last long. It had only to be beaten once or twice and it would throw off its snake-skin. He asserted that this Republican party was the descendant of the Federal party. There was a lawyer in Albany who would not confess that if the Federal party had died possed of any property the Republicans would legally inherit it. The old Federal party had favored the restriction of popular privileges. They held that the masses should not be suffered to vote, and whenever they could place a barrier between the popular voice and the ballot-box they had done so boldly. The Republican Party, which was composed of men of all shades of opinion, including the worst portion of the Democracy, followed in the footsteps of its predecessor. No person had ever heard of the Democracy interposing between foreign born naturalized citizens and the ballot-box; it had been the policy of the party rather to make the road shorter, and smoother, and easier, and to give to every man capable of self-government the opportunity to vote. Not so with the Republicans. The Federal Party had gone out of sight, but

You may break, you may shatter the vase, as you will,
But the scent of the old Federal party will hang round it still.

Here was the new fangled Registry Law, raising its head and taking the place of the property qualifications, demanded by the old Federalists. The Constitution says that a man may vote, if a native-born citizen, after attaining the age of twenty-one years, and if a naturalized citizen, after complying with the requirements of the law; but the Republicans letting the old Federal party peep from beneath their cloak, say that a man shall not vote unless he has been registered; he shall first be put on to an inventory like a flock of sheep and cattle that they may be transferred over. Did the Democracy ever favor such a law? And what is the pretence? That it would be useful in cities? He denied even that. But the Republicans had spread the law over the whole State, and compelled each man to be registered before he could vote. It was done to embarrass the masses of the Democratic party. It was done to remove the laboring men farther from the ballot box; he must leave his pursuits and come up and have his name registered, or he is not permitted to exercise the right of a citizen, which the Constitution secures for him. And the party that enact such a law is a party of philanthropy, of benevolence, and is shedding tears until it is threatened with liquidation for the question of Slavery that belongs to others, while they lay taxes on labor in their own State, in order to abridge the right of suffrage. There is a grave and great question then for the people. Who committed this wrong? Who was it, my friends, that held power in this Capital behind me last Winter? When the Irishman was asked at a funeral who it was that was dead, he answered, "I suppose it's the gintleman in the coffin," and I suppose that the party who did this act was the one that was in that Capital last Winter. This encroachment will go on step by step. When the registry law is patiently submitted to we may be told next that we must not vote unless we wear blue coats and cocked up hats, and at last our liberties will be fatally abridged. No; we must take hold of this evil in the beginning—we must strangle the serpent while it is young—we must apply to this capitol one great rat exterminator, and clear it out, and fumigate it afterwards. But we have another irrepressible conflict before us. Previous to 1839, the Democratic party had borne rule in the State for about a quarter of a century. I speak without regard to the precise accuracy of figures. GOV. SEWARD, a representative and able man in the Republican party, for whom personally I have every respect, was elected Governor of the State, and in his first annual message, speaking of the financial policy of the State of New-York, he bore testimony to the integrity of the Democratic party. History furnishes no parallel to the financial achievements of this State. It has increased fourfold the wealth of its citizens and relieved them from direct taxation, and, in addition to all this, has carried forward a stupendous enterprise of improvement, all the while diminishing its debt, magnifying its credit, and augmenting its resources,—this was the testimony of GOV. S., after 25 years of Democratic rule given in the solemnity of an annual message to the Legislature of the State and literary true. Now, the other party has had power fourteen years or so, and let us see if that following picture of the State can be shown now with a regard for truth. We know it cannot, the State of New-York is now like a crippled and prostrate elephant, struggling and grasping, and only able to pump enough broth to the body to carry on his financial life; instead of the paragraph I have cited, the following would be the words used by the Governor to represent the condition of the State: History furnishes no parallel to the financial embarrassments of this State; it has squandered its wealth and increased direct taxation four-fold, and in addition to all this, has carried a stupendous system of borrowing, all the while its credit magnifying its debt and augmenting in bankruptcy. (Loud laughter and cheers.) Such is the condition of the State. The old Democratic policy of "Pay as you go" is neglected, and we have now on our hands a debt of nearly forty millions, and four millions more are required to complete the Canals, two and a half millions of which is already levied in taxes, or must be, to complete the Canals by 1860, and they must be completed by that time, not only for the demands of commerce, but in order to get a water communication to take our Republican friends up to Salt River in that year. The Democratic Party was not formed for the purpose of conferring office on individuals. It has a divine mission to crrry out, and this must be done by human agency. The Democratic Party have named some excellent men for office. He would not specify them, but he indorsed every word and letter of the resolutions which spoke of them. They are also honorable and able men from Mr. CHURCH down to the end of the list. This ticket is nominated for no personal considerations, but to carry out Democratic policy with Democratic men. When voting for the ticket the Democracy voted not for individuals, but for the success of Democratic policy. The triumph of that policy is essential to the safety of the State, as it will prevent corruption and extravagances. Mr. D. enlarged on Democratic State policy, and warmly extolled the statesmanlike course of Comptroller GHURCH, to whose honorable efforts, he declared, the State was more indebted than the public would believe,—indebted for the preservation of her credit not only at home, but of her credit and honor abroad, when repudiation would have fatally injured her in her finances, as well as in her reputation; and this he had done despite the suicidal policy of the Republican Legislature. The remedy for this deplorable misrule was to be found, if Democrats would put their shoulders to the wheel. The modern Nebuchadnezzars should be turned out to grass for awhile. They have been false to their trusts, and should be punished. If the Democracy is found ready in this irrepressible conflict that is now coming on, all can be remedied. It is within reach, although the Republicans have endeavored to erect a barrier between the voter and the ballot-box. The time has arrived to fight in earnest, and the buttons must be removed from the foils. It was immaterial what were the quarrels and dissensions of Democrats in days gone by, now all good men, all men worthy to be called Democrats, are wanted. No person can indulge now in schemes of ambition, and still be true to his country. He for one did not intend to stay back if others who called themselves friends did. He was going to keep right on, regardless of who falters, who flies, or who keeps company with him. He would not leave the straight road because he found in it one or two passengers whom he did not like. He would move right forward with the Democratic party, which knew no retrograde movements. This irrepressible conflict was one not to sever the States, but to cement the bonds of brotherhood closely. There should be no rivalry except the honorable one of who should be foremost in the great work of Union regeneration. This battle of 1860 was the great fight for the Union. NAPOLEON said that within a certain time all Europe would be Republican or Cossack. He (Mr. DICKINSON) now altered the prediction, and said that the struggle of 1860 was to decide finally whether the serpent that had crawled into this Eden, should be strangled or suffered to go on and work out the dissolution of the Union. For himself he knew the materials of which this conflict is composed, and would give his entire efforts to put down this accursed sectional strife. Like the war-horse, he scented it in the distance, and cried, "Ha! ha! ha!" Would that the Union were here that he might fight the battle at once. Mr. D., in a humorous manner returned his thanks to those very feeling individuals, some of them old friends and some of them old enemies, who were so much exercised just now on his account. He gave them credit for a very great deal of sincerity, and only hoped they would not on his account cry loud enough to distrub the congregation. He found it very consoling to have plenty of sympathy, and especially when it came from life-long enemies. He concluded by urging Democrats once more to discountenance all attempts that looked like present or prospective disruption of the harmony that now prevails in the Democratic ranks. He should, for his own part, go into the coming fight with energy and confidence, and he called on all Democrats to struggle with him for the heritage of their common fathers, and to cry with him

Thou too sail on,oh ship of State!
Sail on, oh Union, strong and great,
Humanity, with all its fears,
With all its hopes of future years;
Is hanging breathless on thy fate.

Fear not each sudden sound and shock,
'Tis of the wave, and not the rock,
'Tis but the flapping of the sail
And not a rent made by the gale.

In spite of rock and tempest roar,
In spite of false lights on the shore,
Sail on, our fear in breast the sea—
Our hearts, our hopes are all with thee.
Our hearts, our hopes, our prayers, our tears,
Our faith triumphant o'er our fears
Are all with thee, are all with thee.

Mr. D. having concluded, the Hon. LYMAN TREMAIN in response to repeated calls, stepped forward and addressed the meeting at considerable length, briefly reviewing the past history of the Democratic Party, contrasting its present condition with that of the Republican and American Parties, and concluding with an invitation to all Americans of Democratic antecedents, to return to the old wigwam.

The meeting then adjourned, with many cheers for the ticket.

The American State Committee.

MEETING AT ALBANY—THE AMERICAN ADDRESS

ALBANY, Tuesday, Oct. 4.

At a meeting of the American State Committee at the Delavan House to-day, an address to the Americans of the State was unanimously adopted, and measures were taken to secure a full vote for the ticket recommended at the Utica Convention. Unanimity prevailed in the Committee.

The address goes to vindicate the action of the Utica Convention. It states that they were unwilling to separate without making any nomination, because the effect of such a course of conduct would be both to abandon their organization and to scatter their forces among the common enemy. They were also unwilling to nominate what is called "a Straight Ticket" because of the acknowledged inability to elect it. To have selected alone either the names upon the Democratic or the Republican State tickets would have been to join hands with the one or the other of these two parties when they belong to neither of them. They had no other course left but to nominate a half-and-half ticket, and thus show that in this State, as in the States of Rhode Island, New-Jersey, Pennsylvania, Illinois, and perhaps in other parts of the Union, it holds the balance of power. This was their first object. In the next place it was purposely designed to give the Canal Board to one party,—the Republicans,—and the Canal Contracting Board, to another party,—the Democrats;—the motive for this division being two-fold: First, to place a safe ward and guard upon the Canal interests of the State, by allowing and requiring one party to watch and stimulate the other to good works; and secondly, to rebuke the Republican State Legislature, who, when the American State officers had control of the Canals, deliberately altered the laws of the State in order to take, not only all the power and patronage from these officers, but to vest it exclusively in themselves. These were the considerations which led them to make up their ticket as they did; and they appeal to the members of their party to sustain their action and thus vindicate its wisdom.

Ex-Gov. WINSTON, of Alabama, who opposed the the Compromise measures in 1850, because he thought they sacrificed the rights of the South in failing to protect slave property in the Territories, now says:

"But the people of the whole South decided against those who assumed that position. The doctrine of non-intervention was presented and accepted by the Southern men connected with Federal affairs; and notwithstanding our public men do not appear now to have understood the question alike, it seemed to me that they did settle it, 'that Congress was to let the question alone.' 'Hands off' was the conclusion and the demand of Southern statesmen. It does appear to me now too late to reopen that issue; right or wrong, we cannot now correct the errors and blunders of the past."

TUESDAY, Oct. 4—P. M.

The Annual Election of the Associated Banks in the Clearing House, held to-day, resulted in the choice of the Reform and Rotation Ticket, by a vote of two to one of the Banks represented. The meeting, though one of considerable public interest, was made strictly private, and we are unable, therefore—being denied admission with other Money reporters for the Press—to speak of exact results, or to report all that was said or done on the occasion in the direction of bringing back the Clearing House management to its original and single purpose of effecting and settling the morning exchanges between the City Banks. To this plain and simple object, it is generally known that a vast amount of impertinent and costly machinery has been added of late years—indeed, it proved formidable for terror and mischief in the panic of 1857—until the office had assumed all the offensive proportions of a bureau of censorship and espionage with its salaried clerk (originally employed, after a very humble but worthy Quaker gentleman had devised and perfected the Clearing system to his hand, at $1,700 a year) acting as self-constituted Minister of Bank Police, on the pay of $4,000 and contingent expenses and perquisites of office in proportion. And all this under sanction of a standing Committee of Management, part of whom, with an ancient odor of conservatism, drawn from the Banks which they chance to represent, deemed it their peculiar privilege to rule and badger their neighbors, and to malign the Free Banking System of New-York, through the ministerial instrument referred to. Of course this sort of thing could not go on always. It had disgusted a good many of the other and older members of the Standing Committees, like the representatives of the Banks of Commerce, Republic, Manhattan, Metropolitan, Chemical and Mercantile, most of whom attended but seldom, and some of them never; and the present consequence is that a thorough and complete reform and rotation, predetermined some days ago, and the ticket printed and openly distributed, was carried through to-day by the vote referred to. We have reason to believe that the vote would have been even more decided but for an impression, industriously circulated and made upon some few of the old Banks down town, that Young America was about to invade Wall-street from the upper precincts and turn the whole Clearing-House topsy-turvy. But as it is, the revolution proved entirely peaceful—the whole affair being accomplished, as one of our neighbors this morning predicted, in "a quiet way"—and the result, thus far, eminently satisfactory. The rest remains with the new Committee of Management, who under instructions from the meeting to-day voted 19 to 14, to reduce the pay of the head clerk to $3,000, and the implied understanding is that such further retrenchment in the budget of expenses, swollen this year to $24,000, will be gone into as the needless and extravagant, as well as extraneous nature of the present machinery may seem to call for. The following Chairman, Secretary and Standing Committees were elected, after Mr. TILESTON, the late Chairman of the Association, as intimated this morning, had asked to be relieved as the presiding officer at their meetings.

Chairman—SHEPHERD KNAPP, of Mechanics' Bank.
Secretary—W. B. MEEKER, of Bank of New-York.
Clearing-House Committee—Lucius Hopkins, of Importers' and Traders' Bank, Chairman; E. W. Dunham, of Corn Exchange Bank; Wm. T. Hooker, of Continental Bank; Ed. H. Arthur, of Union Bank; R. H. Lowery, of Bank of the Republic.
Committee on Suspensions—Wm. H. Macy, of Leather Manufacturers, Chairman; A. V. Stout, of Shoe and Leather Bank; James M. Morrison, of Manhattan Company; Robert S. Oakley, of American Exchange Bank; James Barnes, of Merchants' Exchange Bank.
Committee on Admissions—Thomas Tileston, of Phœnix Bank, Chairman; H. Blydenburgh, of Nassau Bank; Wm. F. Havemeyer, of Bank of North America; R. Withers, of Bank of State of New-York; Moses Taylor, of City Bank.
Arbitration Committee—Wm. Halsey, of Seventh Ward Bank, Chairman; Parker Handy, of Ocean Bank; R. W. Howes, of Park Bank; Chas. F. Hunter, of Peoples' Bank; R. H. Haydock, of Market Bank.

The Exchange Market for the Boston mail closed on rather a moderate business, as the Vanderbilt sails direct on Saturday, and the inclination and supply of Bills on London and Paris were rather to easier figures. Bank bills were done at 110@110¼ ℔ cent. on London and f5. 15@f5. 13¾ on Paris, and some good merchant bills on England were offered at 109½@109¾ ℔ cent.

The Discount Market, outside of Bank, on the declining Averages reported this morning, is rather stiffer on long date paper, and the Brokers quote ½ ℔ cent. advance on prime and fair bills over 4 months to run. We call 4 months' prime lists 7 ℔ cent., and 6 months 7¼@8 ℔ cent., with an addition of 1@2 ℔ cent. where the classification is only fair on single name paper. Sixty day acceptances are 6¼@7 ℔ cent. and demand loans 6@7 ℔ cent., with only a fair inquiry from the Stock Brokers to-day. At Bank we find that the Loans are likely to run off to a larger extent than last week at some of the leading Banks. Their income to-day, 4th October, is heavy, while the new applications from regular dealers are but moderate. At the Sub-Treasury the Customs are $92,000; other receipts, $16,000; disbursements, $98,000; balance, $4,981,262.

There is a further decline of 1 ℔ cent
